ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I wish to express my gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. R. B. Serjeant, who first introduced me to the University of Cambridge while he was at London University, and later on agreed to supervise my research; Professor A. J. Arberry, who gave me his time generously and offered me much useful advice and assistance, and wrote the foreword for this work; H. H. Shaikh 'Ali b. 'Abd Allāh Āl-Thānī, the former Ruler of Qaṭar and H. H. Aḥmad b. 'Ali Āl-Thānī, the Ruler of Qaṭar, whose personal interest in Arabic manuscripts gave me the opportunity to discover many most valuable ones; while the compilation of this work is due to H. H. Shaikh Qāsim b. Ḥamad Āl-Thānī, Minister of Education, who granted me a generous period of leave for study and ordered the Public Library, Doha, to supply all the available material, on the subject. His personal interest ensured that there were no official hinderances to the study: to Professor Muḥammad Ḥamīdullāh, for advising me to benefit from the experience of Western scholars and supplying me with many invaluable microfilms; to Shaikh Naṣir al-Dīn al-Albānī, who placed his extensive knowledge of rare manuscripts at my disposal; to Miss Malak Hanāno, who kindly copied some passages for me from Tārīkh Dimashq and supplied the photo-copies of various important manuscripts; to Shaikh Aḥmad al-Mānī, Cultural Attaché, Sa'ūdī, Embassy, Cairo, and Mr. Fuwad Sayyed of Egyptian Library Cairo for supplying some important microfilms; to Mr. Ma'lūf for translating some chapters of the French version of Muh. Stud. by Goldziher; to Maulana Sa'id Aḥmad Akbarabadi, Dean of the Faculty of Theology, Muslim University Aligarh, for his sincere advice and supervision of my first research work; to Mr. Martin Hinds of the Middle East Centre, and Miss J. Thompson of the University Library Cambridge for correcting my English; to Mr. M. A. Baig, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Barnes for typing this manuscript; to Mr. Z. Baig and Mr. K.S. Bashir Ahmad of the Eastern Bank, Doha, for going through the proof and indexing the book, to Mr. Adil Aqil of Dar al-Irshad, Beirut, and Mr. Gebrail Fatté of Catholic Press, Beirut, for the service they have rendered in printing this book; and finally to Mr. Abdul Badi' Saqar the Director and all the staff of the Public Library, who supplied me with all the required materials, and to Mr. Zuhair al-Shāwīsh for publishing the book.

FOREWORD

Pembroke College,
Cambridge.
16 February 1967.

No doubt the most important field of research, relative to the study of Hadith, is the discovery, verification, and evaluation of the smaller collections of Traditions antedating the six canonical collections of al-Bukhari, Muslim and the rest. In this field Dr Azmi has done pioneer work of the highest value, and he has done it according to the exact standards of scholarship. The thesis which he presented, and for which Cambridge conferred on him the degree of Ph.D., is in my opinion one of the most exciting and original investigations in this field of modern times.

INTRODUCTION

Ḥadīth literature is the richest source for the investigation of early Islamic History. It provides material for an understanding of the legal, cultural and religious ideas of those early centuries.

Ḥadīth is also the repository of the Sunnah of the Prophet, which is the second principal source of Islamic legislation.

Western scholars have devoted much more time to Islamic literature, history and other subjects than to Ḥadīth. The first and the last significant attempt was made by Ignas Goldziher. He published the result of his research, Muhammedanische Studien, in 1890. Since then it has been the fundamental source for the study of Ḥadīth in the West. After the lapse of three-quarters of a century, Professor Schacht tried to investigate the legal aḥādīth. Apart from this there are some articles and a few books which have dealt with the subject in passing. There is only one book in English relating to the subject: The Traditions of Islam by A. Guillaume, which contains no original idea and draws mostly on Goldziher’s work. Since the publication of the work of Goldziher, many valuable manuscripts of the first and second century of the Hijrah have been discovered and some of them have been published. Quite obviously, many theories and conclusions of Goldziher now need to be changed or modified. Had he been aware of these documents, he would, most probably, have formed some other theories.

Apart from his translation of Mishkāt, Professor Robson contributed several valuable articles in this field. He was able to modify some traditional ideas of Western scholars but he himself was influenced by Professor Schacht’s recent works, in particular The Origins of Muhammadan Jurisprudence. Had it not been so, he might have been able to contribute much more.

Professor Schacht’s way of thinking concurs with that of Margoliouth and Goldziher and carries their theories still further, without paying any attention to recent discoveries of manuscripts or research. In this connection I would like to borrow the expression of Professor Gibb. He writes in the Preface to Mohammedanism, describing the need for a new work on Mohammadanism instead of a revised edition of the original work of Professor D. S. Margoliouth, "Between one generation and the next, the bases of judgment necessarily suffer some change. They are modified firstly in the material or scientific sense, by the discovery of new facts and the increase of understanding which result from the broadening and deepening of research. If this were all, it might well be met by minor additions or alterations in the text. More important, however, is the change in the spiritual and imaginative sense. Every work of this kind reflects not only the factual knowledge but also the intellectual and emotional limitations of its period, even when every effort is made to eliminate prejudgments and prejudice. No generation in our changing world sees the problems of life, society, or belief in terms of the thought or values of the previous generation; and the gulf which separates the outlook of 1911 from the outlook of 1946 is one which has rarely been equalled in so short a space of human history". Since the writing of this preface another twenty years have elapsed, yet Professor Schacht still thinks in terms of Goldziher and Maroliouth.

Most Western scholars have praised Professor Schacht's works and have paid very high tribute to him. But much attention does not seem to have been paid to the method of Schacht's research, or to checking his conclusions and relevant references. The conclusions of the present study are in marked contrast to his. So, inevitably I have had to check and investigate his results. It is not my intention to study his work critically and in detail, nor have I sufficient time to do this. But it seems that a thorough study would reveal weaknesses in his work.

My work, as it stands, consists of two parts. The first part comprises eight chapters and five appendices.

First, there is a brief survey of the literary activities in Pre- and Early Islamic Arabia. Then follows a discussion of whether or not the recording of the ahādīth was permitted by the Prophet. Later on a comprehensive survey of the pre-classical Hadīth literature is attempted.

The third chapter, covering some one hundred and fifty pages, provides information about the thousands of books circulating among scholars in the pre-classical period. It records also the common practice of utilizing written documents. This proliferation of books raised the number of ahādīth from a few thousand to three-quarters of a million. Muḥaddithūn had their own terminology, such as 'Haddathanā, 'Akhbaranā, ahādīth Mauḍū'ah, etc. as well as their own method of numbering Hadīth which has not been fully understood by recent scholars of the east and west, consequently it has given rise to considerable confusion.

In this context the method of education in early Muḥaddithūn circles, their ways of handling the documents and the criteria for it was not sufficient for a document to be genuine in its material; was not sufficient for a document to be genuine in its material; it must also be obtained through the proper method. This is clear from Appendix III the Nuskhah of Zubair bin 'Adī. This booklet is classified as Nuskhah Mauḍū'ah, yet about one quarter of its contents are to be found in the Ṣaḥīḥ works of Bukhārī and Muslim, and a good many in other classical collections.

In Chapter V, the writing materials and the problems of authorship and other related subjects are discussed.

Chapter Six and Seven are based to a great extent on the conclusions of the second part of my work.

The sixth Chapter deals with isnād, its beginning and its authenticity. The seventh Chapter deals with the authenticity of Hadīth.

In Appendix No. 1, I have tried to explain the meaning of the terms Akhbaranā, Haddathanā, etc. The evidence collected there makes it clear that these terms were used as a means of transmitting ahādīth from one man to another, either in the form of books, or by dictation or reading from a written work, or by recitation. Oral transmission of Hadīth and aural receiving is only one of several methods.

There were about a dozen manuscripts at my disposal whose authors belong to the early half of the second century, the editing of which would have presented no major difficulties. Later, it was found necessary to confine the work to one and to study it exhaustively in order to achieve some concrete results. I chose the smallest one which is derived from Abū Hurairah, who has been unjustly criticised by some modern scholars. A search was made for these materials among the printed works of ḥadīth and in some manuscripts.

As a result dozens, and even hundreds, of references were found for a single ḥadīth. The spread of ḥadīth, the increasing numbers of narrators and the variety of their localities provide more than sufficient proof for the acceptance of the method of isnād as genuine and as commencing from the very early days of Islam, and not in the second and third centuries of the Hijrah.

In this connection some theories of Schacht are scrutinized, and the effort of modern scholars in the criticism of Ḥadīth is assessed.

In Part Two, there is an edited version of Suhail's manuscript. Two other important manuscripts are included, one of them belonging to Nāfi' (d. 117), and the other to al-Zuhrī (d. 124). As these were the sources utilized by Mālik in his work Muwatta', only references to Muwatta' or the works of their two colleagues Sufyān b. 'Uyaynah and Juwairiyah b. Asma' are given. They provide scope for a further study of Mālik's sources as well as an opportunity to examine the method of handling the materials: e.g., to what extent these works were true to the original wording, and, if changes were made, then to what extent the sense was affected by such changes.

In Chapter 8, the manuscripts and their authors are discussed. There is a lengthy discussion about al-Zuhrī as some modern scholars have attacked him severely without any justification. This chapter shows the lack of any basis for the charges made against him and proves that they are historically impossible to substantiate.

Finally, the work is somewhat lengthy; there were many important issues needing clarification without which further progress in the study of Ḥadīth was almost impossible. The work, therefore, has had to be extended as it would hardly have been possible to eliminate some chapters without damaging its unity. In doing so I have sought as much brevity as was possible.

PREFACE

In October 1966, this dissertation was submitted to the University of Cambridge for the degree of Ph.D. Since then a great deal of new material has come into my possession, which I intended to utilize with a view to extending the work. At the same time, I have been asked by many a scholar to publish the findings of my research as early as possible, and to devote my time to the clarification of other important issues. Utilization of new material would, no doubt, have entailed further delay in the publication of this thesis; hence this work is going to the press in its original form with a few additions and alterations here and there, particularly with regard to the language.

Now that I am free from the work of revision, I hope soon to be able to discuss the weakness of Schacht's Origins of Muhammadan Jurisprudence which I have dealt with, as briefly as the subject and space allowed, in chapters vi and vii of this book, which undoubtedly needs further investigation.

This dissertation is, most probably, the first work of its kind in this field of study and it is hoped that it will open new horizons for further research and help eliminate many prevalent misunderstandings that have resulted from a lack of proper understanding of the true nature of the Ḥadīth literature.

By its very nature, this book (particularly some of its chapters) follows an expanding area of research on the subject and does not claim to be the final word. It shall always be my endeavour to improve and enlarge upon this subject and to cooperate with those who have similar aims and interests. I shall, therefore, be grateful to the scholars and readers for their suggestions and criticisms for further improvement.

CHAPTER I

LITERARY ACTIVITIES IN PRE- AND EARLY ISLAMIC ARABIA

THE ART OF WRITING IN PRE-ISLAMIC ARABIA.

It is said that at the time of the advent of Islām, there were only seventeen persons in Makkah who knew how to write¹. This statement sounds strange in view of the fact that Makkah was a cosmopolitan city, a barter-market and a junction of caravan routes. The figure limiting the learned persons to seventeen appears, therefore, to be an underestimate.

Schools and Other Literary Activities in Pre-Islamic Arabia.

In Pre-Islamic Arabia there were some schools, for example, in Makkah, al-Ṭā'if², Anbār³, Ḥirah⁴, Dūmat al-Jandal⁵, Madīnah⁶, and in the tribe of Hudhail⁷, where boys and girls learned together the skills of reading and writing.

There were some literary activities as well. Tribes used to record the poems of their tribal poets⁸, and sometimes even historical

8. Nāṣir al-Asad, Maṣādir al-Shi'r al-Jāhili, pp. 107-133. Especially, pp. 122-133 where he has collected some 20 references from different poems for incidents¹. There were some occasional writings, such as promissary notes², personal letters³ and tribal agreements⁴. There was also some religious literature, e.g., The Book of Daniel⁵, which is mentioned in several sources, books of wisdom⁶ and tables of genealogy⁷. Was there any translation of the Bible in the early days of Islam? Ruth says, "According to Barhebraeus the gospels had been translated into Arabic for Amīr 'Amr b. Sa'd by John I . . . who came to the Archepiscopal Throne in A.D. 631 and died in 648. Is the Amīr referred to 'Amr b. Sa'īd al-Ashdak . . . who was put to death 70/690 . . ."⁸. The statement of Barhebraeus and the suggestion of Ruth cannot be accepted. The father of 'Amr was born in 624 A.D.⁹. This means that 'Amr was born about 640 A.D., if not later, and thus he was only eight years old when the Bishop, John I, died; and a book of such a nature could not have been translated for a child not more than eight years old. Another argument against the acceptance of the statement of Barhebraeus is that it was the period of 'Umar 634-644 A.D., which covered the time of John I, and it is hard to believe that this could happen in his time. He himself had a copy of Daniel and was rebuked for it by the Prophet, and later on 'Umar himself once beat the man who copied Daniel¹⁰. The attitude of the community towards reading other Scriptures was no less harsh than that of 'Umar¹¹.

So, summing up, it is possible that the verses containing prayers were translated; otherwise we find that Waraqah b. Naufal used to write the Bible in *al-'Ibrānīyah*¹. However, all this written material was not such as to foster a popular desire for literacy, and generally the people did not feel any necessity to learn to read and write.

THE ART OF WRITING IN ARABIA IN EARLY ISLAM.

Read in the name of thy Lord who created,
Created Man of a blood-clot
Read and thy Lord is Most Bounteous,
Who taught by the Pen,
Taught Man, that which he knew not².

This is the first revelation made by God to the Prophet Muḥammad. There is no record to show that he ever studied reading and writing; and it is generally believed that he remained illiterate throughout his life³. Therefore, this very first revelation gives a clue to the forthcoming activities of the Prophet in the field of education.

Educational Policy of the Prophet.

The Prophet was quite aware of the importance of education. This is why, before he migrated to Madīnah, he sent Muṣ'ab b.

1. BU, Bad' al-Wahy, 1, see also, I'tisām, 25. Tauhīd, 51, but in some other riwāyāt the word al-'Arabīyah occurs instead of al-'Ibrānīyah. As he knew both languages, he might have written in both languages or this might be an old discrepancy in copying the text. For more details see Kilgour, The Gospel in many years, pp. 10-11 where it is mentioned that, "The first version of Christian Scripture in Arabic dates from the eighth century . . ." Also, M.J. de Goeje, Quotations from the Bible in the Quran and the Tradition where he agrees with Nöldeke that, "No Arabic version of the Bible, or parts of the Bible, existed either in the time of the Prophet or at the time of the fathers of the Mohammedan church". Semitic Studies, p. 185, in memory of Rev. Dr. A. Kohut, Berlin, 1897.

2. Al-Qur'ān, xcvi, 1-5.

3. Nicholson, in his book, A Literary History of the Arabs, p. 151, says, "The question whether the Prophet could read and write is discussed by Nöldeke . . . who leaves it undecided . . . It appears that he [the Prophet] wished to pass for illiterate, with the object of confirming the belief in his inspiration: "Thou" (Muḥammad) "wert not used to read any book before this (the Koran) nor to write it with thy right hand; else the liars would have doubted (Koran, xxix, 47)." The above-quoted verse by Nicholson gives the impression that the Prophet never read or wrote anything in the past; therefore, there could be no question of wishing to pass for illiterate with the object of confirming the belief in his inspiration.

'Umar and Ibn Umm Maktūm to teach his few followers¹. After his arrival at Madīnah, the Prophet, first of all built a mosque, part of which was meant for a school, and from the very early days 'Abd Allāh b. Ša'id b. al-'Āṣ was appointed to teach the pupils how to write². He was killed in the battle of Badr. However, the victory of Badr brought a good number of prisoners of war and, "...Ransoms for the prisoners of Badr varied; for some of them, the ransom was to teach children how to write"³.

There were also other people appointed as teachers of writing⁴.

In the second year of the Hijrah at least one new school was opened⁵. There were nine mosques in the city of Madīnah⁶, and most probably they were used as schools as well.

The most important and interesting thing in this field is the sermon of the Prophet regarding his educational policy. He ordered the illiterate and literate to co-operate with each other and admonished those who did not learn from their neighbours and those who did not teach their neighbours. Furthermore, he threatened with punishment those who would not learn⁷. It looks as if special significance was given to the art of writing. In a ḥadīth which is recorded by many compilers, the teaching of writing is described as the duty of a father towards his son⁸.

Deputations arriving from outlying distance were given into the custody of Madinites, not only for the provision of board and lodging but also for education. The Prophet used to ask them questions to discover the extent of their learning⁹.

Education of Non-Madinites.

Sending teachers outside Madīnah was one of the main features of the policy of the Prophet; at least forty of the teachers who were on their way to Bi'r Ma'ūnah were murdered¹. Many others were sent to Najrān² and the Yemen³. In the ninth year of the Hijrah a man was appointed to organise education in the Yemen⁴. The other factor, which helped in the diffusion of knowledge, was the influence of the aḥādīth of the Prophet, according to which un-paid teaching is the duty of every learned man, and withholding knowledge is a punishable sin. In contrast mention of many rewards for both teachers and students is made in other *aḥādīth*⁵.

The outcome of the Educational Policy.

As a result of this policy education spread so fast that very soon after the Hijrah, the Qur'ān prescribed that every transaction on credit, however small its amount, should be written down and attested by at least two witnesses⁶.

Another proof of this achievement is the long list of secretaries who wrote for the Prophet permanently or occasionally. They number about fifty⁷. Many of them were engaged in special sectors such as correspondence with tribal chiefs, keeping account of Zakāt and other kinds of taxes, agricultural products, etc.⁸, with, perhaps, one chief secretary who used to carry out the job of any absentee⁹ and who was the seal-keeper of the Prophet, responsible for answering letters and other business matters within three days¹⁰. the effort to correspond with non-Arabs even foreign languages and their scripts were learnt¹.

Many books have been written on the secretaries of the Prophet² which throw light on the Secretarial side of the government of the Prophet. Writing was taught to women and many names are given of women who knew how to write³.

There are also several instances of interesting advice given by the Prophet on the art of letter-writing, revision after completion, dotting ambiguous letters, and drying writings by means of sand.⁴

ARABIC LITERATURE IN THE FIRST CENTURY OF THE hijrah.

The literature of the early days of Khilāfah and the early Umayyad period either perished long ago or was incorporated in the encyclopaedic literature of the Abbasid period.

From the scanty material at our disposal we may sketch a variety of subjects covered by the writers in the period referred to, both non-religious and religious.

Non-religious subjects:

2. Proverbs⁶.
3. Pre-Islamic History⁷.

7. Biography of the Prophet, and the early history of the Caliphs.

It seems as if in the period referred to works on the biography of the Prophet and on other historical topics were in a very advanced stage. We find that work on the biography of the Prophet was begun by the Companions¹⁰. 'Abdallāh b. 'Amr b. al-Āṣ recorded many historical events. It is possible still to trace his work in the ahādīth narrated by 'Amr b. Shu'IB (d. 118 A.H.) as he utilized his great grand-father 'Abd Allāh b. 'Amr's books¹¹. 'Urwah (d. 93 A.H.) in his biography of the Prophet names his authority and most probably he had obtained the information in writing. There are works mentioned here and there on a single topic of the Sīrah, e.g., Memorandum on the Servants of the Prophet¹, a book on the ambassadors of the Prophet to different rulers and chieftains with their negotiations². There are references to the collections of the Prophet's letters in a very early period³. Interest in historical writing was not confined to the biography of the Prophet, as is shown by the compilation of the history of the battle between 'Alī and Mu'āwiyah⁴.

All the above-mentioned subjects and many others were covered by authors who were born within the lifetime of the Prophet and were historically connected with him. Furthermore, all these topics are Islamic in their very nature and are written in prose, not in poetry.

Goldziher and Nicholson's conception of this literature.

Professor R. A. Nicholson, quoting Goldziher's Muhammed-anische Studien, II, p. 203 sqq.⁵, says, "Concerning the prose writers of the period [the Umayyad Dynasty] we can make only a few general observations, inasmuch as their works have almost entirely perished. In this branch of literature the same secular, non-Muhammadan spirit prevailed which has been mentioned as characteristic of the poets who flourished under the Umayyad dynasty, and of the dynasty itself"⁶. He further quotes from Goldziher the names of two scholars who were encouraged by the court of Damascus to historical studies — they are, 'Abīd b. Sharyah and Wahb b. Munabbih —, then gives two more names of Maghāzī writers: Mūsā b. 'Uqbah and Ibn Ishāq. Later, he mentions al-Zuhri as collecting the Ḥadīth, and Kitābu 'l-Zuhd (Book of Asceticism) by Asad b. Mūsā (749 A.D.)⁷. Quoting Goldziher's Muhammedanische Stud., II, p. 72 f, J. Schacht says, "Goldziher has pointed out that those traditions that were current in the Umayyad period, were hardly concerned with law but rather with ethics, asceticism, eschatology, and politics"⁸. This assumption, which was put forward by Goldziher and is accepted by Schacht and other scholars, is based on a misconception of the literary history of the Umayyad period, and perhaps the latter conception of Goldziher is based on the copy of Kitab al-Zuhd by Asad b. Mūsā, which is mentioned by him, but which does not belong to the period referred to. Asad b. Mūsā was born in the early Abbasid period in 132 A.H. and died in 212 A.H.¹.

Goldziher's conception of the early writings and literatures of the Umayyad period is a natural outcome of his observance of the religious conditions of that time. It is not the purpose of the present study to criticize his work Muhd. Studien, which is thought to be an indispensable work for the study of Ḥadīth. Nevertheless, as he is a scholar of good repute, a mistake which he commits necessarily misleads a number of other scholars². And, as it is the only serious work, apart from Schacht's on ḥadīth, it becomes necessary in some vital issues, to look at Goldziher's conclusions.

Before commenting any further on Goldziher's work, it would be better to bring together his deductions, with the relevant references provided by him. Following is a summary of his conception of Islam with regard to the first century after the *Hijrah*³.

Goldziher's conception of early Muslim Community.

1. The Muslim community's sheer ignorance of Islam as a religious practice as well as a dogma.

2. Islam was unable to incorporate its customs within a systematic ideology.

The basis of Goldziher's conclusions — His references and deductions.

1. The people were fighting in the name of Islam, and even built mosques, yet in Syria they did not know that only five prayers a day were an obligatory duty, and for this knowledge they had to refer to an old Companion of the Prophet (p. 30/3)⁴.

2. For example see his remarks on al-Zuhri concerning the mosque of Jerusalem, and their impact on the following writers:

عن ابن محيريز ان رجلاً من بني كنانة يدعى المخدجي سمع رجلاً بالشام يدعى ابا محمد يقول: «ان الوتر واجب» قال المخدجي فرحت إلى عبادة بن الصامت فاخبرته فقال عبادة: كذب ابو محمد. سمعت رسول الله صلعم يقول: خمس صلوات كتبهن الله على العباد فمن جاء بهن لم يضيع منهن شيئاً استخفافاً بحقهن كان له عند الله عهد ان يدخله الجنة ومن لم يأت بهن فليس له عند الله عهد ان شاء عذبه وان شاء ادخله الجنة. ابو داود السنن الحديث رقم / ١٤٢٠

2. The people had no idea how to perform prayers (p. 30/1).

3. Therefore it is not strange if the tribe of Banū 'Abd al-Ashhal had only a slave to act as their Imām for prayers (p. 30/4).

قال محمد محي الدين معلقاً على هذه الرواية. واخرجه النسائي وقال: «الحسن لم يسمع من ابن عباس» وهذا الذي قاله النسائي هو الذي قاله الامام محمد وعلي بن المديني وغيرهما من الائمة.

5. The Arabs in this period were so little accustomed to Islamic conceptions that it was necessary to begin by teaching Muslims that one should not say, as-Salām 'Alā Allāh (30/6).

6. And what can one expect of religious knowledge from a generation in which the people stood in the pulpit reading poetry and believing that it was the Qur'ān (30/7).

7. The official influence and activity in the fabrication of Hadīth goes back to a very early period. The alleged instruction given by Mu'āwiyah to al-Mughīrah, to denounce 'Alī and his followers, to drive them away and not to listen to them as a source of aḥādīth, always to praise 'Uthmān and his followers, to have close contact with them, and to listen to them as a source of aḥādīth, was an official statement to encourage the production and diffusion of aḥādīth hostile to 'Alī and in favour of 'Uthmān. The first drawback in the setting of this picture is the complete omission of any reference which could shed some light on educational activities in early days.

Moreover there are many important issues based on the book al-Uyūn wa al-Hadā'iq by an unknown author, as well as on some other Shi'ite sources, which he should have read critically for anti-Umayyad sentiments, to appreciate their true value.

Furthermore, he takes a single incident and enlarges it to cover the whole century as well as the entire dynasty. It is difficult to agree with him on any of these issues.

If one were to utilize the technique of Goldziher's research and his method of generalization, one might draw the following picture of 20th-century Europe:

1. Western Society is so corrupt that it uses holy churches for unholy purposes.¹

1. Drugs were passed at the meeting of church youth club. Daily Mirror, Apr. 17, 1967.

2. People are so demoralised that they force 8 to 10 year old girls to earn their living as whores¹.

3. There is no security, society being infested with gangsters and racketeers, and people live in constant danger to life and property².

4. They are so cruel that they practice infanticide³.

The obvious absurdity of these conclusions is sufficient to demonstrate the invalidity of Goldziher's technique of research and his method of generalization.

Even if we were to accept his generalizations, it would be almost impossible to follow him to his extreme conclusions, because the references provided by him do not justify his assumptions.

AN ANALYSIS OF GOLDZIHHER'S REFERENCES AND DEDUCTIONS.

I shall now discuss Goldziher's deductions in their numerical order as referred to in the preceding pages. Every student of Islamic law is aware of the difference of opinions of the scholars regarding the Prayer of Witr, whether it is a wājib prayer, or a Sunnah one, etc. This difference exists even today⁴, and the same kind of argument is used by the scholars up to now. Can we assume that the whole Muslim world is ignorant of the fact that there are only five prayers a day? Furthermore, the Syrians used to go to Makkah for the pilgrimage and according to Goldziher, 'Abd al-Malik, being afraid of political upsets in the time of Iban al-Zubair, wanted to prevent them from pilgrimage⁵. There must have been a considerable number of them otherwise 'Abd al-Malik would not have been afraid of them.

So the Syrians who attended Hajj every year did know the prayer — Ṣalāt — with certainty. So how can one suggest, on the basis of the above-mentioned text, that the Syrians did not know the numbers of the daily prayers?

1. A man used two sisters of 8 and 10 for the purpose of procuration. The Times, Apr. 22, 1967.

2. Criminals in England steal £500,000 weekly, Daily Telegraph, May 2, 67.

3. A City leads in legal abortions. The Sunday Times Page 3, 5th Feb. 67.

(b) Ibn al-Humām, Fath al-Qadīr, Vol. i, 300-303.

5. Goldziher, Muh. Stud., pp. 35-37.

The second quotation is even more irrelevant to his conclusion. According to Ibn Sa'd¹, Mālik b. al-Huwairith was ordered by the Prophet to teach the people how to pray. Therefore, he probably went to various mosques to show the correct performance of Ṣalāt. Not only the heading of al-Bukhārī gives this impression, agreeing with IBN Sa'd, but even the wording of the statement itself confirms this. He prayed only to give an example to those present, not at an obligatory prayer-time, nor to find fault with those who were praying and to accuse them of mistakes. It is a very strange conclusion that if someone teaches, then the whole community must be ignorant; yet if there is no mention of the educational and instructional activities of that period Goldziher accuses the ruling dynasty of secular and non-Muhammadan spirit².

3. Banū 'Abd Ashhal lived in Madīnah or in its suburbs. This was the tribe of Sa'd b. Mu'adh³. Abū Rāfi' says that the Prophet used to visit Banū 'Abd Ashhal after the 'Aṣr prayer and speak to them; sometimes the meetings and discussions even continued till the Maghrib prayer⁴.

In this case a number of these people must have known how to pray. This tribe was not in too remote a desert to have been unable to find an Imām and to find only a slave to lead the prayers. This tribe was in the very heart of Madīnah, of which Goldziher himself has a good opinion⁵. Would it not be more reasonable to interpret this incident to mean that even the client of a tribe could be the Imām in prayer if he was equipped with sufficient knowledge of Islam?

4. This statement is a mursal one. Its authenticity is challengeable. Even if it is an authentic statement, it was a single incident. How could an isolated instance be used as inclusively as is suggested by Goldziher? There were more than fifty famous Companions who had settled down in the city. Among them were Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī, Anas b. Mālik, Qabīṣah b. al-Mukhāriq, etc.⁶. Al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī says that 'Abd Allāh b. Mughaffal was one of the ten who were sent by 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb to teach the Basrites¹ Therefore, even if it had happened, it should not be used for generalization.

5. The conclusion is irrelevant. The Arab society with whom the Prophet was dealing was pagan. The new religion and its method of worship were totally new to these people and, as there were no precedents, they had to learn everything however trivial it might otherwise appear. This particular case concerns the Companions of the Prophet who were learning from him, so it cannot be taken as a proof of general ignorance of Islamic conceptions.

6. Quotation No. 6 implies that the Governor, 'Utbah b. al-Nahhās al-'Ijlī, did not know the Qur'ān, and was so ignorant that he recited poetry maintaining that it was a part of the Qur'ān. The statement seems to be doubtful. As Ibn al-Kalbī, the narrator of this incident, had Shi'ite tendencies, and the same may be said of 'Awānah, while 'Utbah was 'Uthmānī and pro-Umayyad, the whole story appears doubtful. The other reason for doubt is the age of 'Utbah bin al-Nahhās al-'Ijlī.

At the time of the assassination of the Caliph 'Uthmān (d. 35), 'Utbah was the governor of Ḥulwān². Al-Mughīrah, while going to see Mu'āwiyah in 45 A.H., appointed 'Utbah governor of Kūfah³. After this date, he is not mentioned by Ṭabari. In the year 11 A.H., he took Part in the *Riddah War*⁴. Therefore it would be safe to assume that he must have been at least twenty years of age at that time, and that if he lived to the common age of about sixty years, he might have died somewhere about 50 A.H.

'Awānah, most probably, might have been born somewhere about 85 A.H.⁵ and could not have been in a position to criticize the governor till he was fifteen or twenty years of age. Bearing all this in mind, one could only assume that this event took place at the beginning of the second century, when 'Utbah was probably one hundred and ten years of age. It is questionable that a man of such an age could be appointed a governor even supposing that he lived that long.

7. It is a well-known fact that there had been wars between Umayyads and Alides. Every government, even now in every country, employs people who are thought to be loyal to the regime, and suppresses rebels. Similar measures were taken by the Umayyads. But in the entire quotation there is neither an official nor an unofficial statement alleging fabrication of the aḥādīth and the diffusion of them. Mu'āwiyah says, "denounce 'Alī, and those who assassinated the Caliph 'Uthmān, and pray for 'Uthmān . . ." etc. There seems to be nothing wrong in this attitude, except for his denunciation of 'Alī. There is not a single word giving the slightest hint of any fabrication of aḥādīth.

Going through Goldziher's references, one reaches the conclusion that his picture of the religious knowledge and practice of the first century of the Hijrah is incomplete and unbalanced. Therefore, his other conclusions, on the above-mentioned assumptions, are baseless. He is quite wrong in his belief that prose writing in the Umayyad period was secular and non-Muhammadan. The bulky literature of Hadīth in the Umayyad period, as is shown in the third Chapter of the present study, compels us to reject this assumption. The claim is based on incomplete knowledge of the period and the arbitrary judgment that religious people were against the Umayyads. If a few incidents can be given to prove that the pious were against them, a more lengthy list could be provided of those who worked for the Umayyads and by any standard the Abbasids were no better, if not much worse, than the Umayyads. It is the duty of a historian to be more cautious when he writes on the Umayyads, as the entire literature available for the subject is the product of the anti-Umayyad period.

Other Forms of Literary Activity.

At the time of the Prophet, people used to copy whatever he dictated. Many Companions had copies of his letters dispatched to different people. It is not clear whether this was done under his instruction or on a personal initiative.

There were some kinds of records kept even at the time of the Prophet. Once he ordered a statistical list to be made of those who embraced Islam. The list contained some 1,500 names¹.

1. BU, Jihād, 181.

Those who were recruited for any military expedition even in the time of the Prophet were also registered¹. It was 'Umar who introduced the system of registers at the state level and this may be reckoned as the beginning of systematic official records. He had all the treaties with the tribes or foreign governments preserved in a box, *Tābūt*².

There was a house attached to Caliph 'Uthmān's house for the preservation of Qirtās. Marwān was hidden there by Fātimah bint Sharik, and thus his life was saved³ while the Caliph 'Uthmān was assassinated. It might have been a state-paper depository. Later on Ṭabarī mentions Bait al-Qarātīs (State-Paper House) in connection with the assassination of 'Amr b. Sa'id, in 69 A.H.⁴. Towards the end of the first century, Qirtās was even distributed to governors for official use⁵.

PRIVATE—PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

In the middle of the first century of the Hijrah, we find a man called 'Abd al-Ḥakam b. 'Amr al-Jumāḥī, who established a public library which contained Kurrāsāt (books) on various subjects, different kinds of games and a place to hang the mantles. People were free to use the library for reading or for amusement⁶.

At the same time there was the library of Ibn Abū Lailā, which contained only the Holy Qur'ān and people gathered there for recitation⁷.

There is another library mentioned in the possession of Khālid b. Yazīd b. Mu'āwiyah⁸; but it is not the earliest record of anything like a public library as was supposed by Krenkow, because the libraries of 'Abd al-Ḥakam and Ibn Abū Lailā most probably existed at an earlier date than this library.

There may have been some other libraries which are unknown to us because this information is scattered far and wide, and there is no special chapter on early libraries in the sources available.

However, the existence of these libraries in such early times gives us sufficient proof of the presence of early intellectual activities during the Umayyad period. It was neither a secular, nor a non-Muhammadden literary period, as we are given to understand by Goldziher. Had it been so, there could not have been such a tremendous achievement in every field in the early Abbasid period.

CHAPTER II

RECORDING OF "AHĀDĪTH": AN ARGUMENT

According to the general belief, ahādīth were orally transmitted at least for one hundred years¹. 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz was the first who asked Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm², al-Zuhri³ and others⁴ to collect ahādīth and al-Zuhri was the first who recorded them⁵. On the authenticity of this statement, there are differences of opinion among orientalists. Muir accepts it with the remark that there are no authentic remains of any such compilation of an earlier date than the middle of the 2nd century of the *Hijrah*⁶. While Guillaume in referring to this statement says, "The ḥadīth must be regarded as an invention"⁷, Ruth also refers to Guillaume and some other scholars who doubt the trustworthiness of the report⁸. Goldziher and Schacht have rather harsh opinions. Schacht says, "On the tendency underlying this spurious tradition, see Goldziher, Muh. Stud. II, 210 f., and Mirzā Kazem Beg, in J.A., 4th Ser., XV, 168"¹.

He further says, "Hardly any of these traditions, as far as matters of religious law are concerned, can be considered authentic; they were put into circulation . . . from the first half of the second century onwards"².

It is not strange that Schacht should maintain this attitude regarding the authenticity of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz's statement, because he believes that almost all the legal ahādīth were invented long after the death of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz, and, therefore, there cannot be a question of transmitting ahādīth orally, let alone recording them.

The general belief in the late recording of ahādīth and oral transmissions for more than 100 years was due to the information provided by the muhaddithūn themselves.

The names of the earliest compilers in ḥadīth provided by muhaddithūn belong to the mid-second or the later half of the 2nd century of the *Hijrah*³.

It is not clear who was the first who furnished this information, but later on all the scholars, even al-Dhahabī and Ibn Ḥajar, repeated the old statement without scrutinizing it, even though they themselves had provided ample evidence in their writings against this common belief.

This theory of the recording of ḥadīth in the 2nd century was the result of many misconceptions:

1. Misinterpretation of the words: Tadwīn, Tasnīf and Kitābah which were understood in the sense of recording.

2. The terms Ḥaddathanā, Akhbaranā, 'An, etc., which were generally believed to be used for oral transmissions.

3. The claim of the powers of unique memory of the Arabs, so that they had no need to write down anything.

4. Ahādīth against recording ahādīth.

These points will be discussed systematically.

1. Meaning of Tadwīn.

Tadwīn and Tasnīf do not mean writing down. According to Tāj al-'Arūs, Dīwān means a collection of Booklets, (al-Dīwān Mujtama' al-Suhuf). Tadwīn means collection (Dawwanahū, Tadwīnan, Jama'ahū), and Tasnīf means classification according to the subjects.

The statement that أول من دون العلم ابن شهاب الزهري was mostly understood and generally translated as meaning that the first who wrote down ahādīth was al-Zuhrī; but he was neither the first recorder of ahādīth nor the first compiler or composer, as we shall see later on.

2. The term Haddathanā, Akhbaranā and 'An etc., and their meanings will be discussed in appendix No. 1¹.

3. Unique Memory. It is a fact that all human beings do not have equal powers of memory or ability. Any human capacity can be improved by exercise to a certain extent. Arabs used to recite their poems from memory; they may thus have developed this power. There might have been some people with an excellent memory while others had a bad one. Therefore, to claim that depending on their powers of memory they did not need to write things down is disputable. At the same time it is also wrong to doubt the powers of memory. I have found a rare example of this in the memory of Mr. Stanley Adams about whom the Times reports, "His acute business sense and remarkable memory — after one reading of the stock exchange list he was reputed to be able to quote every price — led to many appointments over a vast range of business interests"². Churchill's memory is another example.

4. THE ahādīth AGAINST WRITING DOWN THE ahādīth.

In Taqyīd al-'Ilm, al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī deals with the subject of the recording of ahādīth at length concerning whether or not it was prohibited by the Prophet. The first part of the book is mainly concerned with the disapproval of writing; and the first chapter of this part mainly contains ahādīth from the Prophet, forbidding writing of anything except the *Qur'ān*¹.

In the second chapter he mentions the names of 6 Companions who disapproved the recording of the ahādīth of the Prophet². They are:

Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī.
'Abd Allāh b. Mas'ūd.
Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī.
Abū Hurairah.
'Abd Allah b. 'Abbās.
'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar.

In chapter 3, he provides a list of Successors which contains 12 names of persons who were supposed to be against writing down *ahādīth*³. They are:

Al-A'mash.
'Abīdah.
Abū al-'Āliyah.
'Amr b. Dīnār.
Al-Ḍaḥḥāk.
Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī.
Abū Idrīs.
Maṣṣūr.
Muḥammad b. Sīrīn.
Mughīrah.
Al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad.
'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Abd Allāh.

In part two, chapter 1, he gives the names of al-Ash'arī, Ibn Mas'ūd and Ibn 'Awn who were against writing of Hadīth besides the name of the Caliph 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, who consulted the Companions over the recording of the hadīth officially and after their full support he disapproved of it⁴. But almost all of them had written down ahādīth and in many cases had sent them to others. Full details will be found in the third chapter of this work, under the very name of the scholars who are supposed to be against the writing of ahādīth.

There now remain ahādīth from the Prophet which forbid writing down of *Hadīth*¹, and these need investigating.

THE PROPHET AND THE WRITING OF AHADĪTH.

The ahādīth against the recording of ahādīth are transmitted by three Companions; 1. Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī, 2. Abū Hurairah and 3. Zaid b. Thābit.

The hadīth of Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī had two different versions. One of them is transmitted by 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Zaid². The authorities agree unanimously that he was a weak narrator, and according to al-Hakīm and Abū Nu'aim he transmitted even false ahādīth; and in the words of Ibn Hibbān, "He used to reverse ahādīth, without knowing it, and put the full isnād for interrupted ones, so he deserved to be abandoned"³. Therefore, the hadīth of Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī transmitted by 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Zaid is weak and unacceptable.

The same 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Zaid occurs in the hadīth of Abū Hurairah⁴. Therefore, this hadīth is also weak and unacceptable. The third companion is Zaid b. Thābit. His hadīth is Mursal. The transmitter from Zaid is al-Muṭṭalib b. 'Abd Allāh who did not meet Zaid⁵. So, this hadīth is not acceptable. Furthermore, hadīth from Zaid has two versions. In one of them, his disapproval of the writing of hadīth is based on the order of the Prophet⁶, while in another statement it is said that he disapproved of it because the written materials were his personal opinions⁷. Therefore, this statement does not confirm his disapproval of the recording of the ahādīth of the Prophet.

Now there is only one hadīth transmitted by Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī, which reads, "Do not write from me anything except the Qur'ān and whoever has written anything from me other than the Qur'ān should erase it"¹. Even this hadīth, which is transmitted by Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī on the authority of the Prophet, is disputed among scholars. According to al-Bukhārī and others, it is the statement of Abū Sa'id himself, that is erroneously attributed to the Prophet². But it seems to be a hadīth coming from the Prophet, and it actually meant that nothing should be written with the Qur'ān on the same sheet, because this might lead someone to conclude that sentences or words written in the margin or between lines belonged to the *Qur'ān*³. It should be remembered that this order was given in the period when the Qur'ān was being revealed and when the text itself was incomplete. Otherwise, there does not appear to be any sound reason to forbid the writing of ahādīth.

The Prophet himself sent hundreds of letters. Many of them were very lengthy, containing the formulae for prayers and worship⁴. According to the Qur'ān the Prophet's conduct and deeds should be followed by the community⁵. The Qur'ān itself demands a record of credit transactions⁶. Therefore, it looks as if there were no general instructions not to record the ahādīth, though it might have been explained by some of the scholars in this way.

On the other hand there is clear evidence to show that the Prophet approved of recording *ahādīth*⁷. Further, we find that quite a number of Companions recorded ahādīth and among them were those people who were responsible for transmitting hadīth which forbade its recording⁸. Bearing all this in mind one arrives at the conclusion that the Prophet's disapproval of writing ahādīth most probably meant the writing of the Qur'ān and non-*Qur'ān*ic material on the same sheet⁹ because that might have led to misunderstanding. There is another theory that people were forbidden to write down ahādīth in early days because all attention should be paid to the Qur'ān and its preservation, and that later on, when there was no danger of neglecting the Qur'ān, the previous order was abrogated and permission was given to write *ahādīth*¹.

Among the scholars, Sayed Rashid Riḍā held an opposite theory. In his conception, the writing of hadīth was allowed in the early days of Islam and was forbidden at a later period².

This was the natural outcome of his view of the legal value of the hadīth. In his theory, the Prophet did not mean to make his ahādīth an everlasting legal source or part of *Dīn*³. Therefore the Prophet forbade the writing down of the ahādīth. This order was strictly observed by the Companions. So, the Righteous Caliphs did not write, let alone consider publishing hadīth. Moreover the senior Companions were even against the imparting of Hadīth. The Successors did not have any Ṣaḥīfah from the Companions and they recorded only when they were asked to do so by the Governors⁴. Rashid Riḍā describes all ahādīth coming from the Prophet and the Companions in favour of the recording of hadīth, however authentic they may be, as defective and weak or designed to serve a special purpose⁵. Whereas, in fact, there are among them ahādīth which were universally accepted among the scholars as authentic. Meanwhile he gathers all the defective, weak, Mursal and Maqtū' ahādīth, even those that had nothing to do with the interdiction of writing, and treats them as authentic and in the sense of interdiction⁶.

It is not the aim of the present study to explore the legal validity of the Sunnah. But going through the historical data and the cross-references to hundreds of statements one finds oneself bound to reject Riḍā's hypothesis totally. The theory is based on superficial study of hadīth literature. No scholar can find a single authentic hadīth forbidding the writing of ahādīth save the one of Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī, and even this is challenged by scholars of the stature of al-Bukhārī¹.

A glance at the 3rd chapter of this work would be sufficient to refute Rashid Riḍā's claim that the Companions and the senior Successors did not copy out ahādīth.

Even if we accept Rashid Riḍā's verdict that the ahādīth were copied out by the order of the Caliph, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz, it was not blasphemy. The Qur'ān itself was copied out and published by order of the Caliph 'Uthmān. He sent four copies of the Qur'ān to the provincial capitals², so that the people should recite strictly in accordance with them³. If these copies were meant for mass education they would have been insufficient by any standard. Therefore, even the learning of the Qur'ān was based on memorizing and private copying. The task was carried out by both means: by government appointed teachers⁴ and by volunteer scholars⁵. The same method was adopted for the diffusion of *hadīth*⁶. Hence the assumption of Rashid Riḍā that the Righteous Caliphs and the Companions did not write down ahādīth or make any arrangement for their publication has no real basis.

MISINTERPRETATION OF EARLY SCHOLARS' STATEMENTS.

There have been many scholars who copied ahādīth but sometimes disliked doing so. They gave reasons for their attitudes which were not based on the Prophet's order and in many cases the reasons were omitted. Sometimes when the statements were given in full they were interpreted as against writing, without any serious consideration.

Some examples:

1. It is reported that Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī was against writing; the reason he gave for his dislike was: "whoever writes depends on it''¹. Early scholars considered books bad stores of knowledge²; and the best store was one which was kept in memory and could be utilized anywhere and at any time.

2. The name of 'Āmir al-Sha'bi has been given in the lists of those against writing³. If one reads his statement carefully one must reach the conclusion that al-Sha'bi was not against writing. We have two of his statements on the subject. In one of them he says, "I neither wrote with black on white nor did I ask any man to repeat a ḥadīth twice to me."⁴ The purpose of this statement is to show his great power of memory so that he never needed to ask anyone to repeat a ḥadīth, and to hear it only once was sufficient for him to memorize it. The statement has no connection with the subject of recording of ḥadīth. In another statement he advises his students to write down everything they hear from him, if they did not have paper they were even asked to write on walls⁵.

Therefore, to present these two statements in such a way as to prove that he was first against writing and then in its favour⁶ is extremely ingenious as an explanation but extremely doubtful as an argument.

Summing up the argument, al-Khaṭīb describes reasons for disliking recording⁷. He gives several reasons but there is no evidence that the interdiction of writing was based on any Prophetic order. Many scholars who disliked writing at one time or another purely on personal prejudice, nevertheless committed ahādīth to writing.

The ahādīth related from the Prophet concerning the interdiction of writing were precautions required by a specific set of circumstances motivated by the care, lest the Qur'ān be mixed with non-Qur'anic material. The writing of ahādīth by a vast number of Companions⁸ is itself a proof that the prohibition of writing of ahādīth (if any) was neither a general, nor a permanent order.

In the 2nd and 3rd chapters of the 2nd part of al-Taqyīd, al-Khaṭīb gives some examples of those who wrote down ahādīth but ordered that these be erased on their death. He also gives examples of those who regretted having erased the ahādīth.¹

In the 3rd part, al-Khaṭīb gives details of ahādīth coming from the Prophet in favour of recording; then he provides the list of Companions, Successors and others who recorded *ahādīth*². It is hoped the next chapter of this work will be more comprehensive than al-Khaṭīb's in this respect.

Before concluding this chapter, one need mention only one more point. Going through all these statements on the writing of the Hadīth or its interdiction, Goldziher deduced from them a strange conclusion. In short, that there were two groups in the early days of Islam; a) Ahl al-Hadīth, who were pro-Hadīth, and b) Ahl al-Rāi', who were anti-Hadīth. Ahl al-Rāi' forged traditions relating to the interdiction of writing; so that they could prove untrustworthiness of the Hadīth and get rid of it. This was against the interest of Ahl al-Hadīth, so they invented ahādīth in favor of recording, to prove its trustworthiness³.

A glance at the names of the scholars — who are said to be against writing — is sufficient to refute this conclusion of Goldziher. The most famous Scholars, who were supposed to be extremists against writing, were Ibn Sīrīn and 'Abīdah who were muhaddithūn. Among the most famous Fuqahā' who wrote down¹ and were in favour of recording of the ahādīth were Ahl al-Rāi' as Hammād, Ibrāhīm, Al-A'mash, al-Zuhri, Abū Ḥanīfah, Abū Yūsuf, Mālik and al-Thaurī. Secondly there were no Fuqahā' at that time without a sound knowledge of ahādīth. A muhaddith might not have been a Faqīh, but a Faqīh was — at that time — a muhaddith versed in the science of analogy.

CHAPTER III

PRE-CLASSICAL "HADĪTH" LITERATURE

Before giving details of the literary activities of the early Muhaddithūn, it is necessary to discuss the problems with which the chapter is concerned.

1. The terms of Nuskhah, Ṣaḥīfah, Kitāb, Risālah etc., and their meanings.
2. Classification of literary period.
3. Methods employed to establish dates of birth and death of scholars.

THE TERM Kitāb, Nuskhah, etc.

The word Kitāb generally has two meanings, a letter or a book. In many cases the context helps to make clear a possible ambiguity as to whether it means a book or a letter. In some cases even context does not give any clue. As a general rule we may decide that whenever this word occurs in reference to the Companions' writings — with a few exceptions e.g. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Amr b. al-'Aṣ, Ibn 'Abbās, Jābir etc., — it may be taken in the sense of a letter, while in the writings of the Successors, it should be taken as meaning a book¹, except where the context suggests another meaning. I do not mean that the word Kitāb when translated as a 'letter' means a personal letter unrelated to educational activities. These letters were, in fact, the genesis of the later work.

1. This differentiation in translation is based on the volume of their literary activities.

Nuskhah AND Ṣaḥīfah.

These two words were used, it appears to me, synonymously. Al-Dhahabī says, Hammām has a famous Nuskhah from Abū Hurairah — "Nuskhah Mashhūrah"¹, while the same work is mentioned by the name of *Ṣaḥīfah Hammām*².

Nuskhah.

This word means "copy" and perhaps the word is derived from the very practice of copying out ahādīth from teachers' books. It is interesting to note that they sometimes use two words: Al-Aṣl and Nuskhah. Ibn Bashkuwāl describes 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Muḥammad as saying, "He did not lend his Al-Aṣl (original books), and if someone requested him persistently, then he used to give it to a scribe who copied it and revised it, then handed it to the borrower"³. One more example may be added to clarify this point. Abū Ja'far says that Ibn Lahī'ah brought his books before the scholars and dictated to the students. Some of them were good at writing while others committed many mistakes. Later Ibn Lahī'ah did not produce his books. So anyone who wanted ahādīth from him used to go to his students to copy out the book and to read it to Ibn Lahī'ah. Therefore, the ahādīth of anyone who found a correct copy of the book نسخة صحيحة were correct, otherwise there were many discrepancies⁴.

Ibn Abū Hātim al-Rāzī says that Ibn Wahb and Ibn al-Mubārak used to follow the original books — Uṣūl — of Ibn Lahī'ah, while others used to write down from copies — Nusakh —⁵.

Thus the word Nuskhah may have derived from the fact that the students used to copy out from teachers' books. As it was copied on sheets — Ṣaḥīfah or Ṣuḥuf — the word Ṣaḥīfah was employed as well. Ṣaḥīfah was known to Arabs even before Islām⁶.

2. See Ṣaḥīfah Hammām, edited by M. Ḥamīdullāh. For further example of synonymous usage, Tahd., xi, 253, and 254 for Ṣaḥīfah/Nuskhah of Ibn Mauhab.

5. Rāzī, ii, ii, 147-8.

word is also used in the Qur'ān, e.g. *Ṣuḥuf Ibrāhīm wa Mūsā*¹. Though the word originally means a sheet, yet it was not used in its strict sense and was sometimes employed for a booklet. The Ṣaḥīfah of Ḥammām, for instance, contains 138 aḥādīth and covers a space of 18 pages in print². There are ample references describing the number of aḥādīth contained in a certain *Ṣaḥīfah*³. There was another famous Ṣaḥīfah of 'Abd allāh b. 'Amr b. al-ʿĀṣ, called al-Ṣaḥīfah al-Sādiqah, which consisted of hundreds of *aḥādīth*⁴, which, obviously, could not be written on a single sheet. Therefore, the word Ṣaḥīfah or Nuskah means a book or booklet.

Kurrāsah. This word means a booklet or a note-book.

Risālah.

This word also means a letter as well as a book. We find a reference to the word Risālah in the statement of Ibn Sīrīn, saying that the Risālah of Samurah to his son contained much knowledge⁵. The portion of this Risālah, which is still preserved in Muʿjam of al-Ṭabarānī, indicates that the Risālah was a lengthy one⁶. Another book which bears the name of Risālah is that of al-Shāfiʿī, which covers some 600 pages⁷. On the basis of these facts, therefore, in this chapter the terms Ṣaḥīfah, Risālah, Huskhah and Kitāb will be translated as 'book'. The nature of the books in most cases is not specified. A book might contain 5 or 500 or 5000 aḥādīth.

INFORMATION CONCERNING PRE-CLASSICAL HADĪTH LITERATURE AND THE METHOD OF ITS ARRANGEMENT IN THIS CHAPTER.

As a general rule, the books are recorded under the names of the scholars from whom the students derived their written collections. Usually the method by which the material was collected by the students is not disclosed, whether the students copied it out from particular books or recorded from dictations or lectures, or compiled their collections from memory in the later periods. This last method was very rare and wherever a reference has been found to this practice, it has been described as such.

In short, where a student is described as having written aḥādīth of a certain scholar, his name is listed under the name of that scholar.

Here I have tried to utilize the explicit references to writings or written records, without utilizing the logical approach.

One point remains to be clarified in this context. There is not a single chapter in any book dealing with aḥādīth where one may find references to the early books on aḥādīth. The books are mentioned here and there, especially when the scholars criticize someone or compare two Scholars, A and B. Then sometimes they say that 'A' was Ṣāhib Kitāb. This means that 'B' was famous for his memory while 'A' depended mainly on books; meanwhile, whether or not 'B' was in possession of books is not disclosed. In this statement "Kāna Ṣāhib Kitāb" does not mean that he had only one book, he might have had 10 or 20 books, but in this context it is only used in the sense of dependence upon the book. Yet according to English it must be translated to mean 'he had a book'. Wherever a sentence of this type occurs in this chapter, it usually has the meaning that the man depended on books. Where the context requires any other meaning it has been specified.

THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE LITERARY PERIOD.

I have tried to cover the literary activities concerning ḥadīth up to about 150 A.H. The main point of interest in confining the period of research within this limit relates to the fact that during this period books began to appear in voluminous quantities. The pattern of composing books changed from the mere recording of aḥādīth at random or composing of booklets on a single topic, to cumulative writings incorporating scores of topics in one book e.g.

Muwatta' of Ibn Abū Dhi'b, Muwatta' of Mālik, the books of Ibn Juraij, Ibn Ishāq, Ibn Abū 'Arūbah, Ma'mar b. Rāshid, al-Auzā'i, Sufyān al-Thaurī, and so forth. Most of these authors died about 150-160 A.H. In later periods, this material was utilized by the classical authors, and edited with the utmost care, as is clear from the style of Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj, al-Bukhārī, etc.

I have divided this period somewhat arbitrarily. It is the aim of the chapter to throw some light on the early literature of ḥadīth, with special reference to the first and second century A.H. separately. Classification on this basis is very difficult and therefore arbitrary. There were many people who were born in the early first century and lived for a considerable period into the second century as well. Therefore, I have divided the scholars and their activities as follows:

1. The writings and works of the Companions.
2. The writings and works of the Successors who lived mostly in the first century.
3. The writings and works of the scholars whose literary careers cover the later part of the first century as well as considerable period of the second century of the Hijrah. In this class I have listed all the scholars who were born up to or about 65 A.H., maintaining that the 35 years time and over before the end of the century was sufficient for them to begin their literary career in the later part of the first century.
4. The writings and works of the scholars who were born between 70 A.H. and 110 A.H. on the assumption that every one in this category had sufficient time for literary work, up to 150 A.H. The activities of the 1st and 2nd groups and roughly half of the 3rd, belong to the first century and the rest to the early second century.

DATING OF SCHOLARS' LIVES.

In this classification the dates of birth and death are essential. In some cases both dates are given by historians, while in other cases no date is given or only one of the two dates is given. Sometimes different dates of birth or death of the same person are given; e.g. al-Zuhrī is said to have been born in 50, 51, 56, 58 and to have died in 123, 124 or 125 etc¹. In such contradictory cases one of the dates has been arbitrarily chosen. It is doubtful whether, if I had investigated all the statements of their births and deaths, I would have been able to reach any definite conclusion. Moreover, as I shall be dealing with what amounts to about 500 Scholars such an investigation would be excessively lengthy as well as fruitless.

1. Fischer, 73-4.

If only the date of death is given, I have either subtracted from it 60 to 65 years as an average span of a man's life, to establish the approximate date of birth. Or I have gone through the names of his teachers and tried to recognize the one who died earliest and then subtracted 20 from this date as being the average age for the beginning of the study of ḥadīth. In most cases the Scholars must have been born much earlier than the assumed dates, but there is no adequate means of ascertaining the actual dates. For example, if a man narrated ahādīth from Ḥasan al-Baṣrī (d. 110), we may say with a fair amount of confidence that the man was born about 90 A.H., as according to the customs of the time, they usually began to learn ḥadīth in their twenties¹. Moreover, such a student would not necessarily have gone to a teacher on his death-bed. He might have attended the lectures well before the death of his teacher and may have accompanied him for years.

This supposition cannot be contradicted on the basis of the practice of the later periods when people began to take children as young as 2 and 3 years to listen to the reading of certain books², because those books had been compiled a long time before and it became a fashion to have an authority to transmit them with Isnād Ālī.

Where no date of birth or death of a scholar is available, the above mentioned method is utilized to establish an approximate date of birth, i.e. going through his teachers to find out an approximate birth date then adding about 65 years to obtain a rough date of his death. So, if a man transmitted from Nāfi' (d. 117) then the Rāwī may have been born about 95 A.H. and have lived to (95 + 65) about 160 A.H.

I. WRITINGS OF AND FROM THE COMPANIONS

1. ABŪ AYYŪB AL-ĀNSĀRĪ, Khālīd b. Zaid (d. 52 A.H.)¹.

The following derived aḥādīth from him in written form:

1. His nephew. Abū Ayyūb wrote down some aḥādīth and sent them to his nephew².
2. Another member of his family Ayyūb b. Khālīd b. Ayyūb related a collection of aḥādīth from his father who related them from his grand-father. The collection consists of 112 *aḥādīth*³.

It is not clear whether the collection was made by Abū Ayyūb himself, by his son, or by his grand-son.

2. ABŪ BAKR AL-ṢIDDĪQ, The First Caliph (13. A.H.).

It is said that he wrote down 500 aḥādīth of the Prophet. Later on he was reported to have burnt them saying that he might have heard these aḥādīth from men who, he thought, were trustworthy, but who, as a matter of fact, were not⁴. Al-Dhahabī describes this statement as false⁵. In fact Abū Bakr was the man most closely attached to the Prophet. Had he wanted to make a collection of aḥādīth, he would not have needed a medium between him and the Prophet. Many scholars have quoted this statement without examining its authenticity or referring to its refutation⁶. It is quoted by Abū Rayyāh as evidence against the writing down of *aḥādīth*⁷. Had it been authentic, it would have been a proof of early writing of aḥādīth, as the burning of the Ṣaḥīfah was for quite different reasons. It implies also that at the time of writing he did not know the interdiction of the Prophet.

7. Abū Rayyāh, op. cit., 42.

1. 'Amr b. al-Āṣ. Abū Bakr sent a letter to 'Amr b. al-Āṣ, which contained *aḥādīth*¹.
2. Anas b. Mālīk. Abū Bakr wrote a letter — Kitāb — on taxation for Anas b. Mālīk, who was the governor of al-Bahrain. This booklet seems to be a copy of the Prophet's letter — Kitāb — concerning the rates of *Zakāt*².
3. ABU BAKRAH AL-RHAQAFĪ, Nufai' b. Masrūḥ (d. 51 A.H.)³.

He sent a letter to his son, the Governor of Sijistān, which contained the Prophet's sayings relating to the business of justice⁴.

4. ABU HIND AL-DĀRĪ⁵. Makḥūl wrote down aḥādīth from him⁶.
5. ABU HURAIRAH (19 B.H. - 59 A.H.)⁷.

He joined the Prophet at Khaibar in the year 7 A.H. He had no occupation or any interest other than gaining knowledge. He lived in Madīnah depending upon the Prophet for his food and other necessities. He accompanied the Prophet for four years⁸. This is the period between his arrival at Khaibar and the death of the Prophet. According to some other statements he accompanied the Prophet for three years⁹. He was sent to Bahrain¹⁰ with 'Alā' al-Ḥaḍramī. Thus, if we subtract this period of absence from four years, it becomes three years.

According to Abū Rayyāh he accompanied the Prophet for only 21 months¹¹. He thinks that 'Alā' remained as Governor of Bahrain till he died during the Caliphate of 'Umar, who then appointed Abū Hurairah in his place. But historical facts are against this assumption. 'Alā' himself was discharged from his duties, and in 9 A.H. the post was filled by Abān b. Sa'īd¹². Most probably Abū Hurairah also left the office at that time and returned to Madīnah. We find him at the end of the year 9 A.H. at Makka in the pilgrimage¹. This is the claim of Abū Hurairah, and his statement is attested to by 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās as well². So there is no sound reason to reject this statement and to believe that 'Alā' held the office continuously³. Even if 'Alā' had held the office, there would not have been any logical obligation to prevent Abū Hurairah's departure from 'Alā.

Here, it is better to clarify two more points raised by Abū Rayyah, who charged Abū Hurairah with favouring the Umayyads, yet was unable to produce any authentic ḥadīth from Abū Hurairah against 'Alī and in favour of the Umayyads. Abū Rayyah himself gives us ahādīth transmitted by Abū Hurairah in favor of 'Alī and against the Umayyads⁴. If we go through the Nuskhah of Suhail, ḥadīth No. 14, we find Abū Hurairah giving 'Alī a place even higher than 'Umar in the battle of Khaibar. Thus it is inconceivable that he was against 'Alī. To interpret all these ahādīth, as is done by Abū Rayyah⁵, in the sense that he circulated them in order to blackmail Mu'āwiyah is ridiculous. Equally ridiculous is the claim of Abū Rayyah and others in which they state that Abū Hurairah used to eat with Mu'āwiyah and to pray with 'Alī⁶, as it was historically impossible⁷.

Abū Rayyah doubts Abū Hurairah's honesty and bases his verdict on the practice of 'Umar, as he distributed the money which he brought from Baḥrain⁸. But this was the usual practice of 'Umar with many other Governors⁹.

Abū Hurairah lived only three years with the Prophet, yet he transmitted more ahādīth than any other Companion. According

According to Ibn al-Jauzī, there are 5374 ahādīth transmitted by him in Musnad Baqī and 3848 ahādīth in the Musnad of Ibn Ḥanbal. According to Aḥmad Shākir, after subtracting repeated ahādīth, there remain 1579 ahādīth transmitted by Abū Hurairah¹.

In a period of three years he observed and learnt some 1500 traditions, which are a mixture of verbal and practical Sunnah. This does not seem to be a large number, although both in his life-time as well as in the later period he was charged with having transmitted a vast number of ahādīth. Yet all those who have criticized him, have praised him one time or another².

We are not sure whether or not he had any written collection of ahādīth in his early life, but mention is made in a later period of the books he had in his possession:

1. Ḥasan b. 'Amr al-Damarī saw many books of ahādīth in Abū Hurairah's possession³.
2. It is said that Bashīr b. Nahik made his collection, copying the book of Abū Hurairah, but the Isnād of this statement is somewhat defective⁴.

The following derived ahādīth from him in written form:

1. 'Abd al-'Azīz b. Marwān. He had almost all the ahādīth of Abū Hurairah in written form⁵.
2. Abū Ṣāliḥ al-Sammān. He transmitted from Abū Hurairah and others. Al-A'mash wrote down 1000 ahādīth from him⁶ and Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī (d. 96) made his collection of Abū Hurairah's ahādīth through al-A'mash-Abū Ṣāliḥ-Abū Hurairah⁷. It is not mentioned whether or not Abū Ṣāliḥ himself had any

5. ABŪ MŪSĀ AL-AṢḤARĪ, 'Abd Allāh b. Qais (d. 42)¹.

It is reported that he was not in favour of writing down ḥādīth. He even erased the writing of his students².

'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās derived aḥādīth from him in written form. Abū Mūsā wrote some aḥādīth and sent them to 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās³.

6. ABŪ RĀFI' (d. before 40 A.H.)⁴.

The following derived aḥādīth from him in written form:

'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās. He used to go to Abū Rāfi' and ask him about the Prophet's deeds and sayings on certain occasions. Then he or his slaves would write the answers⁵.

Abū Bakr b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Hishām. Abū Rāfi' gave him a booklet (Kitāb) which described the Prophet's method of commencing prayers and invocation of God⁶.

7. ABŪ SA'ĪD AL-KHUDRĪ, Sa'd b. Mālik (d. 74 A.H.)⁷.

Abū Sa'īd is the main narrator of a ḥādīth from the Prophet which forbade the writing down of *ḥādīth*⁸. He did not agree with his students who wanted to make written collections of *aḥādīth*⁹, but he himself transcribed *aḥādīth*¹⁰. Once he was informed about a Fatwā (legal decision) of Ibn 'Abbās which was against the Prophet's ḥādīth; then he said to his informer: "We shall write to him, then he will not give these decisions to anybody"¹¹. It is not known whether or not he wrote but Ibn 'Abbās later changed his Fatwā. Had he written the letter, it would probably have referred to the Prophet's ḥadīth.

8. ABŪ SHĀH, a Yamanite.

He heard the sermon of the Prophet at Mecca in 8 A.H., on the occasion of its conquest. He requested the Prophet to have this sermon taken down in written form. The Prophet ordered someone: "Write it for Abū Shāh"¹.

9. ABŪ UMĀMAH, Sudai b. 'Ajlān (10 B.H. - 81 A.H.)².

Al-Ḥasan b. Jābir asked him about the recording of ḥadīth and he approved of it³.

10. ABD ALLĀH B. 'ABBĀS (3 B.H. - 68 A.H.)⁵.

He was a cousin of the Prophet. He was known for a keen mind and love of knowledge. After the death of the Prophet he asked one of his Ansari friends to join him in seeking knowledge. This man laughed at him and left him. So Ibn 'Abbās devoted himself to learning⁶.

Ruth states that "he is one of the few Meccans reputed to have been able to write before the days of Islām"⁷, though he was born in the Islamic period!

He used to sit outside the doors of the Companions in very hot and windy weather. When they saw him, they would say: "O cousin of the Prophet...if you had sent someone we would have come to you". The usual reply of Ibn 'Abbās was, 'No, I must come to you'. Then he used to ask for *aḥādīth*⁸.

He was so eager for knowledge that he would ask as many as 30 Companions about a single incident⁹.

His recording of aḥādīth.

It seems that he wrote what he heard¹ and sometimes even employed his slaves for this purpose². After prayers he would sit down to recite the Qur'ān with his slaves behind him. If he found any verse which needed investigation of its meaning he repeated it and the slaves noted it down; then he used to inquire about it³.

His method of teaching.

His lectures covered most of the knowledge and the subjects of those days. It seems that he fixed certain days for certain subjects, e.g. one day for law, the next day for commentary on the Qur'ān, the third day for al-Maghāzī, (war) etc.⁴ At the time of the pilgrimage his teaching circle was much enlarged⁵. He even had an interpreter to translate the questions and answers for non-Arabs⁶.

There are some statements giving the impression that he disapproved of the writing of *ḥadīth*⁷. On the other hand there are statements encouraging the recording of *ḥadīth*⁸. If we bear in mind his personal literary activities while he was learning and afterwards when he was teaching, we need to explain his discouragement of writing for some other reason than the prophet's prohibition. He had a copy of the legal judgements of 'Alī, and copied it for one of his students⁹. At more advanced age when his eyes failed him, people used to read his books to him¹⁰. Later, some of his books were in the possession of his slave-student Kuraib, who entrusted them to Mūsā b. 'Uqbah¹¹.

12. ABD ALLĀH B. 'AMR B. AL-'ĀS (27 B.H. - 63 A.H.)².

He embraced Islam before his father³ and emigrated to Madinah after 7 A.H. He knew the Hebrew language as well⁴. found some books of Ahl Al-Kitāb at Yarmūk and used to read them⁵ and even transmitted some knowledge from them. Perhaps he studied these books with Sarij of al-Yarmūk, a Kitābī in his early days⁶.

His Literary Activities.

He came to know that Companions of the Prophet were writing *aḥādīth*⁷. This information aroused his curiosity and he began to write everything he heard from the Prophet. Some of his colleagues objected to his writing down everything, because sometimes the Prophet might have been in an angry mood and he might have uttered something which was not necessarily meant for the record. On this point 'Abd Allāh requested the Prophet's permission to write and made the point clear asking whether he could record everything at every stage. He was told he could⁸.

He named his book *al-Sahīfah al-Ṣādiqah*⁹. He wrote some aḥādīth which were taught by the Prophet to Abū Bakr at the

The following derived ahādīth from him in written form:

Abdullāh b. Rabāḥ al-Anṣārī⁶.

'Abd al-Raḥmān⁷.

Abū Sabrah. 'Abd Allāh dictated to him⁸.

'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Salamah al-Jumāḥī⁹.

Shufai b. Mātī'. He had two books from 'Abd Allāh¹².

13. 'ABD ALLAH B. MAS'UD (d. 32 A.H.)¹³.

It is reported that he was against the recording of hadīth, and that he even erased one of the books¹⁴.

there should not be any discrimination between the recording of Tashahhud and other ahādīth.

His son brought a book and swore by God that it was his father's book in his own hand-writing¹.

14. 'ABD ALLĀH B. 'UMAR B. AL-KHATTĀB (10 B.H. - 74 A.H.)².

He transmitted a large number of ahādīth, and was so strict in relating them that he did not allow the order of a word to be changed even though it would not have altered the meaning³.

He was very famous for strictly following the Prophet's path, even in insignificant matters⁴. Therefore his actions were taken as a model⁵.

He did not take part in political crises and prayed behind anyone of the victorious⁶, yet never agreed with their manners, and even rebuked al-Ḥajjāj in the presence of thousands of men⁷.

He had books⁸. One Kitāb which belonged to 'Umar, and was in his possession, was read to him by Nāfi' several times⁹. Once when a man asked him to write down all the ahādīth for him, 'Abd Allāh replied that it was too much for him to write. Then he gave the man a piece of advice for his behaviour¹⁰.

The following derived ahādīth from him in written form:

Jamil b. Zaid al-Ṭā'i. He went to Madīnah, perhaps after the death of Ibn 'Umar, and collected his ahādīth from various sources¹¹.

'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Umar⁴.

'Umar b. 'Ubaid Allāh⁵.

One of his friends in Syria⁶.

It is said that he was against the transcription of *hadūth*⁷. This assumption is based on the statement of Ibn Jubair that he was asking Ibn 'Umar some questions which were written in a booklet; had Ibn 'Umar known it, it would have been the end of their relations⁸. But it is a mere impression of Ibn Jubair while Ibn 'Umar's practice is quite against this assumption⁹.

15. 'ABD ALLĀH B. AL-ZUBAIR (2 A.H. - 73 A.H.)¹⁰.

'Abd Allāh b. 'Utbah derived ahādīth from him in written form:

Ibn Al-Zubair wrote a letter to him concerning some legal decisions and quoted ahādīth of the Prophet in it¹¹.

16. 'ĀISHAH, UMM AL-MŪMINĪN (d. 58)¹².

A very large number of ahādīth is transmitted by her. It is certain that she knew how to read; but it is difficult to say whether or not she knew how to write. It is mentioned many times that she was asked questions and wrote answers; but the word Katabat might be used even if the letters were dictated by her.

She transmitted two letters, — Kitābān — of the Prophet which were found in the case of his sword¹³.

17. 'ALĪ B. ABŪ ṬĀLIB (23 B.H. - 40)⁴.

He was one of the scribes of the Prophet. The Prophet once dictated to him and he wrote on a large piece of parchment on both sides⁵.

'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās who had the legal decisions of 'Alī in written form³.

19. ANAS B. MĀLIK (10 B.H. - 93)¹.

He was ten years old when the Prophet moved to al-Madīnah and served the Prophet his entire life in this city.

There is a long list of his students who transmitted aḥādīth or made their own collection from him. As he lived till the end of the first century of the Hijrah his circle of students became very wide. Some false books and aḥādīth are also attributed to him.

He advised his sons to write aḥādīth of the Prophet and to learn them². He used to say, "We do not value the knowledge of those who have not written it down"³. Here knowledge means aḥādīth of the Prophet.

His Books.

Hubairah b. 'Abd al-Rahmān says, "When Anas b. Mālik imparted the aḥādīth many people gathered and he brought books and gave them to the people saying, 'I heard these aḥādīth from the Prophet, then I wrote them down and read them to him'⁴."

The following derived aḥādīth from him in written form:

41. SAMURAH B. JUNDUB (d. 59)⁵.

He wrote his ahādīth and later on they were transmitted by many scholars.

The following derived ahādīth from him in writing:

Al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī. He also transmitted Samurah's book⁶.

Muḥammad b. Sīrīn. He knew Samurah's book and praised it⁷. It is not clear whether or not he obtained this book from Samurah.

Sulaimān b. Samurah. He transmitted a lengthy book from his father⁸. A part of this work is still preserved in Mu'jam al-Kabīr of al-Ṭabarānī⁹.

43. SHADDĀD B. AUS B. THĀBIT (17 B.H. - 58)².

He was a nephew of the poet Ḥassān b. Thābit.

On his way to pilgrimage he dictated ahādīth to two of his companions³.

44. SHAMGHŪN AL-AZDĪ, AL-ANSĀRĪ.

He had some books (Suhuf). He was the first to write on both sides of papyrus which he pressed and sewed together⁴.

45. UBĀI B. KA'B (d. 22)⁵.

One of the oldest companions of the Prophet, he was famous for his Quranic knowledge.

The following transmitted his books or made their own collections from him:

Rufai' B. Mihrān (d. 91). He transmitted a lengthy book of commentary on the Holy Qur'ān from Ubai b. Ka'b⁶.

Samurah and 'Imrān differed about some actions of the Prophet concerning prayer; then they wrote to Ubai who in turn confirmed Samurah's sayings⁷.

46. 'UMAR B. AL-KHATTĀB. THE SECOND CALIPH (c. B.H. 40 - 23 A.H.).

It is said on the authority of 'Urwah that 'Umar wanted to have ahādīth written and compiled under the patronage of the Government. He consulted the Companions who unanimously agreed to his proposal. However, he reconsidered the matter thoroughly and then disapproved of it¹. According to Yahyā b. Ja'dah, he even sent a circular demanding that everyone who had written a collection should burn it². Somewhat similar to this, is a statement of al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad³. All these three statements are Mursal. The links between 'Umar and the narrators are unknown.

The transmitters of 'Urwah's statement are:

Ibn Wahb — Yūnus — Al-Zhurī — 'Urwah — 'Umar.

Abū al-Yamān — Shu'aib — Al-Zhurī — 'Urwah — 'Umar.

A. Razzāq — Ma'mar — Al-Zhurī — 'Urwah — 'Umar.

Qabīṣah — Al-Thaurī — Ma'mar — Al-Zuhūrī — 'Urwah —

Al-Firyābī — Al-Thaurī — Ma'mar — Al-Zuhūrī — 'Urwah —

Ibn 'Umar — 'Umar⁴.

It is now clear that al-Firyābī's colleague, Qabīṣah did not mention Ibn 'Umar, nor did the other pupils of Ma'mar or any other student of Al-Zuhūrī. Therefore, it was al-Firyābī who inserted the name of Ibn 'Umar erroneously. Hence, it is a mursal hadīth and the authority of this statement is questionable. The other point is that, although schools had been established for the teaching of the Holy Qur'ān, and teachers had been sent here and there⁵, yet written copies of the Qur'ān were not provided for these centres. Therefore it is difficult to believe that 'Umar would have given priority to the recording of the ahādīth while the sacred book itself needed attention.

Nevertheless, if we accept the statement without any argument, as a genuine one, then it would be clear that the writing of hadīth was not considered to be against the order of the Prophet, otherwise these Companions would not have agreed unanimously with 'Umar on the subject.

It is also incorrect to say that he did not want anything to be written except the Qur'ān. He asked the governor of Kūfah to write down certain poetry¹, and even allowed Anṣār to write down their poems of the Islamic and Pre-Islamic periods². He introduced the system of registers in official business³.

It is assumed that he was against the imparting of *ahādīth*⁴, and detained Ibn Mas'ūd, Abū Dharr and Abū al-Dardā', as they imparted ahādīth in great number⁵.

The number of ahādīth narrated by them are 848, 280 and 179 respectively⁶. The last two numbers are very small. 'Umar himself sent Ibn Mas'ūd⁷ and Abū al-Dardā'⁸ as teachers to Kūfah and Damascus respectively, and praised the former very much. It is also reported that he advised Companions to reduce the imparting of ahādīth, for the sake of the Qur'ān, and in the same statement he informed them about ablution. It looks as if he suggested they should impart ahādīth regarding practical life⁹, and not to tell the stories of war (Maghāzī) which might have been a very interesting subject of Qusṣās in those days. As he sent instructors to teach the Qur'ān and Sunnah to the people¹⁰, how could he have forbidden the people from learning Sunnah? On the other hand it is also reported that he encouraged the writing of *ahādīth*¹¹.

He used to quote ahādīth from the Prophet in his official letters¹². Furthermore, it looks as if he collected several documents from the Prophet, concerning financial matters and taxation, and put them together¹³. This was, later on, in the possession of Ibn 'Umar and was read to him by his servant Nāfi', several times¹⁴.

49. Zaid B. Arqam (d.66)⁵.

He wrote down ahādīth in a letter and sent them to Anas b. Mālik⁶.

50. Zaid B. Thābit (d.45).

He learnt Hebrew and other languages and used to write for the Prophet in Arabic and non-Arabic languages as well⁷. It is reported that he was against the writing down of ahādīth. When Marwān wrote down his ahādīth without his knowledge, he imparted a hadīth from the Prophet in which the recording of ahādīth was prohibited⁸. But the narrator of this hadīth is al-Muṭṭalib b. Ḥanṭab, who never saw Zaid, so it is invalid. Meanwhile there is another narrator Al-Sha'bī who claims that the written material was not the ahādīth of the Prophet, but the personal opinions and decisions of Zaid, so he said, "Marwān, excuse me, it is my opinion"⁹. This might be the case, but it is difficult to accept because we have positive evidence of his attitude contrary to what has been said e.g.

On the request of the Caliph 'Umar, he wrote his judicial opinion concerning the share of grand-fathers in inheritance and handed it to 'Umar¹⁰.

There is a conflicting statement of Ibn Sīrīn in which it is reported that he not only disliked writing but also the reading of books⁸. Yet the same person — Ibn Sīrīn — says that he used to have Atrāf and ask 'Abīdah those *ahādīth*⁹. Furthermore, Shuraiḥ used to write him if he had some difficulties¹⁰. On considering these statements, one arrives at the conclusion that he was not against the writing of ahādīth. It is quite possible that at certain times and in certain cases he disapproved of it, because methods of teaching were always changing.

47. 'UMAR B. 'ABD AL-'AZĪZ (63 - 101)³.

He wrote some ahādīth and sent them to 'Abd al-Malik b. Ṭufail al-Jazarī who in turn transmitted them⁴.

48. 'URWAH B. AL-ZUBAIR (22 - 93)⁵.

He had a literary mind and taste and did not participate in the political turbulence of his period. His relations with the Umayyads were, however, amicable.

He began to write ahādīth in the early stages of his life. We know that he wrote down ahādīth of 'Ā'ishah⁶. Some of his books were destroyed which caused him great distress and sorrow throughout his life⁷.

He taught ahādīth systematically⁸ and used to dictate ahādīth to his students⁹. He was aware of the importance of revising after writing and we find his advice concerning this¹⁰. Furthermore, he emphasised the recollection of ahādīth and refreshing the memory¹¹.

His Literary Career.

He is, perhaps, one of the first writers who compiled the comprehensive biography of the Prophet. The pattern set by him as well as the material he collected was followed and used by the later compilers such as al-Zuhrī etc. Going through al-Ṭabarānī's quotations, it looks as if the book was a large one.

Here are some extracts of the headings in this book collected from the first volume of al-Ṭabarānī's al-Mu'jam al-Kabīr, which gives some idea of the nature and size of the work.

The names of the Persons who were killed in the battle of Badr. I, 38a.

Those who were killed in the battle of al-Yamāmah from Al-Anṣār. I, 40a; 85a; 89b; 93b.

Battle of Khandaq. I, 95b.

Battle of Ajnādīn. I, 93b.

Al-Ṭabarī has preserved some lengthy passages from this work as well¹.

This book has been transmitted by various students and it was quite possible that it differed according to the transmitter, as compilers always add new material and revise the previous work. The following versions can be traced:

Abū al-Aswad — 'Urwah².

Hishām b. 'Urwah — 'Urwah³.

Al-Zuhrī — 'Urwah⁴.

Yaḥyā b. 'Urwah — 'Urwah⁵.

It is said that he did not write down *ahādīth*², but according to 'Uthmān b. Abū Shaibah his book was perfect³. It is possible that he was not in favour of writing down traditions in lectures, but that one could memorize what was said in the lecture and later write down from memory. Perhaps this was his own practice too. He wrote to Nafi' asking for ahādīth and received them in written form⁴.

It is reported that he was against the writing down of *hadīth*² and did not allow books to be kept in his house³. On the other hand, we find that Ibn 'Aun — who reported Ibn Sīrīn's dislike of books — himself related that he used to read books to Ibn Sīrīn⁴. Furthermore, he reported that once Ibn Sīrīn informed him of a certain Kitāb which was in the possession of Ibn Jubair's family and asked him to go to Ziyād b. Jubair and read it⁵. Apart from this, Ibn Sīrīn used to attend the lecture of 'Abidah with *Āirāf*⁶ — the partly written ahādīth —. There are other reports concerning his agreement with the writing of ahādīth for the sake of memorizing only⁷. In another report he is described as dictating ahādīth to Hishām, who wiped them out after memorizing them⁸.

A book has been reported in the possession of his brother Yaḥyā b. Sīrīn. According to the available descriptions, it appears that the book was written by Ibn Sīrīn himself⁹. Either in his early age he agreed to the writing down of ahādīth and abandoned this practice in later days, or his statement was misunderstood, or both. In his later days, it looks as if he disliked mixing with people or having any kind of social contacts. When Al-Zuzā'i went to see him, he did not allow him to sit down, and asked him to depart after the salute¹⁰. So it is quite possible that he gave up his books and cut off his relationships with people. One of his statements quoted by al-Khaṭīb in Kifāyah, was that one should not read any book, except from one's own teacher¹¹. The same idea is maintained by Wakī' who said that students should not look in other people's books lest they remember some ahādīth from the book before receiving it through proper channels and later relate it as if they had heard them from the authority¹².

147. MĀLIK B. ANAS (93 - 179)¹⁰.

He is one of the authorities on ahādīth. He began to learn ahādīth by writing. It seems that he wrote from all his teachers and did not depend on mere memorizing. Ibn 'Uyaynah said that the scholars followe Mālik in testifying the narrator. If Mālik had written from him, they would write from him¹¹. Once a student asked Mālik about a certain scholar, and he asked the student whether he found this man's name in his book. He replied: "No". Then Mālik said: "Had he been trustworthy, you would have found his name"¹². Almost all his wordings and decisions were recorded by his keen pupils¹³.

He used to correct the books of his students. Ibn Wahb says: —“Mālik used to read my book, and whenever he found a mistake, he erased it and rewrote it correctly”¹.

His book al-Muwattaʿ has been published time after time, and hundreds of students read it. The book has some 15 versions. Later on, al-Dāraquṭnī compiled a book, giving all the different versions of the book². It was thought that this was the first book compiled in Hadīth or Fiqh, but now, fortunately, we have some of Mālik's sources at our disposal.

148. MAʿMAR B. RĀSHĪD (96 - 153)³.

He wrote ahādīth and, according to Ibn Nadīm, he compiled a book on *al-Maghāzī*⁴, but, perhaps it was the work of al-Zuhri with some of his contributions. He is said to be one of the earliest compilers of *ahādīth*⁵ and compiled al-Jāmiʿ which is still preserved⁶. A book of Tafsīr is also mentioned⁷; it is not clear whether it was his own work or that of Qatādah, his teacher; most likely the latter.

Ibn al-Nadīm records that he compiled a book called Kitāb al-Sunan, which contained the books of the sacred laws, e.g. prayer, fasting, pilgrimage, etc.³. It is not clear whether it was the same al-Muwatta' or another work. It seems that the work existed until a few centuries later. Yūsuf b. The book survived in the verions of Ibn Hishām. Of late, original copies have been discovered⁷. Although these manuscripts are incomplete, they provide sufficient material for research and perhaps would lead to changes in many theories.—

203. SUFYĀN B. SA'ĪD AL-THAURĪ AL-KŪFĪ (97-161)¹.

His studies began in early childhood². Al-Shamī has preserved the advice of Sufyān's mother regarding the writing down of ahādīth and the effect of knowledge on personal morals and behaviour³.

According to some statements, he transmitted less than ten percent of what he had collected⁴. He was very frank and even blunt with rulers. He did not accept any kind of assistance or money from others⁵ and led a life of poverty. Sometimes he had to sleep without food⁶.

When orders for his arrest were given by the Caliph Al-Mahdī, he fled from Mecca to Baṣrah and the last few years of his life (115-161) were spent in hiding⁷. He was such a keen learner that even in the days of his hiding, he contacted scholars and learnt from them⁸, while teaching others⁹. He used to go through his books to refresh his memory¹⁰. He imparted ahādīth from memory. If he had any doubt about his memory he asked students not to write them¹¹, and sometimes said that as he had not seen the books for years, he should not be asked that sort of *ahādīth*¹². He asked his pupil Yahyā to fetch his book from Al-Kūfah. Yahyā replied that he was afraid for his life, so how could he dare to go and fetch the books¹³. Once, being afraid of some trouble, he hid his books in a cell. Later, when they were brought out, it was found that there were nine heaps of them each reaching in height to the chest of the man¹⁴. He asked his students to bring

TAḤAMMUL AL-'ILM

THE LEARNING AND THE TRANSMITTING OF HADĪTH IN THE FIRST AND THE SECOND CENTURIES OF ISLAM.

According to the Qur'ān, a group should remain behind even in the time of war, to gain sound knowledge in religion so that they may preach to their folk when they return¹.

Learning at least a portion of the Qur'ān and the ahādīth of the Prophet is obligatory for every Muslim. In response to this requirement, there was an outburst of educational activities in the entire Islamic world. For many centuries, in the educational history of Islam, the word Knowledge — 'Ilm' — was applied only to the learning of ahādīth and related subjects².

In this chapter a sketch of the educational method of the early centuries of Islam will be drawn. It should be clear that this is only a sketch. As there were no organized universities and colleges with fixed curricula and definite methods of instruction, all activities could take any shape the tutors preferred. The manner, even of a single teacher and a single student, would differ from time to time and from place to place. Therefore, any kind of generalization of the method, and any restriction to a certain practice would be dangerous and misleading.

The Teachers.

The Prophet called himself a teacher³, and used to sit with the Companions in a circle to teach them⁴. His words and deeds were carefully watched by his Companions and were recited by them with the help of each other till they memorized them¹.

2. See for example: The titles of Abū Khaithamah's book, Kitāb al-'Ilm, and al-Khaṭīb's book, "Taqyīd al-'Ilm" which deal with the problem of the recording of ahādīth, also, Ibn 'Abd al-Barr, "Jāmi'", Bayāyan al-'Ilm".

As it was not possible for every Companion to be with the Prophet on every occasion, they came to an agreement between themselves to attend his circle in shifts². It was a common practice among them to inform absentees about the Prophet's sayings and deeds³. This was not only the agreement among them but was also the command of the Prophet. The Companion Sulait was so embarrassed by his absence which was due to his residence on a far off piece of land given to him by the Prophet, that he requested him to take the land back from him⁴.

Memorizing the ahādīth of the Prophet in early days.

Some Companions made their memoranda of ahādīth in the life of the Prophet and some others made their collections later on⁵. However, it was a common practice among them to recollect the ahādīth of the Prophet either individually or with each other's help⁶. The same practice continued in the time of the Successors⁷.

The appearance of the books.

In the middle of the first century of the Hijrah, books of ahādīth compiled from the teachers' lectures began to appear, of which one of the earliest mentioned was the book of Bashīr b. Nahīk and Hammām, the pupils of Abū Hurairah¹. The books of Ibn 'Abbās and Jābir b. 'Abd Allāh, etc., belong to the same period.

The Aṭrāf system and its effect.

According to the sources now available, in the third quarter of the first century of the Hijrah a new technique was employed in the learning of hadīth, which was called Aṭrāf, which meant copying only a part of ahādīth.

The earliest recorded usage of this method —so far as I know—was that of Ibn Sīrīn in the lecture of his teacher 'Abīdah al-Salmānī (d. 72 A.H.)². The practice continued in the traditionists' circles³. Later on many books were compiled according to this technique and were used as a concordance by the early scholars⁴.

The Aṭrāf method was a very important step towards the writing of ahādīth. It contained three main issues:

A student's knowledge of a hadīth, gained by some source before attending the lecture.

The writing down of ahādīth in part before attending the lectures.

The effort to gain hadīth from a higher narrator in the chain of transmitters and non-satisfaction with the material gained from the lower source.

1. Supra, Abū Hurairah, in the third chapter.

2. 'Ilal, i, 387.

3. See for example:

1. Ḥammād b. Abū Sulaimān, Fasawī, iii, 83a;

2. Ismā'il b. 'Ayyāsh, Tahd., i, 324;

3. Mālik b. Anas and 'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Umar, 'Ilal, 154a;

4. Sufyān al-Thaurī, Jāmi', 43b;

5. Yazīd b. Zurai', Maṣrūhīn, 115b.

4. See for details, al-Kattānī, al-Risālah al-Mustatrafah, 167-70.

Until the end of the third quarter of the first century of the Hijrah, a pattern was almost fixed for the learning and teaching of ḥadīth which flourished in the second and third centuries.

The curricula of education in the first century.

It looks as though, in the very early days, there were only two methods of learning ahādīth: either to associate oneself with one of the scholars, or to attend the lectures which were regularly held. The Companions of the Prophet used oral transmission, dictation, and even reading from a book¹, yet it is not clear whether or not they used to impart ahādīth according to subjects, or only narrated on their personal choice, or whether the discussion was conducted on a certain topic which was raised by someone.

Perhaps the earliest record of a classified diffusion of ahādīth is the method of Ibn 'Abbās and 'Urwah². It appears that these scholars used to revise ḥadīth among themselves according to subjects³; hence, it was not an open lecture. So, in the above two instances, they did not transmit ahādīth completely, nor its proper wording; they only referred to it by mentioning its essential aspects. Therefore, they forbade students to learn traditions by this method⁴.

Teaching of ahādīth according to Shuyūkh.

The common practice of the second century was the teaching of ahādīth according to shuyūkh they came from. Once Yahyā asked Al-Fallās whence he was coming. He replied, "From the lecture of Mu'adh". Then he asked whose Ḥadīth was he transmitting? al-Fallās replied that he was imparting the Ḥadīth of 'Awn...⁵. It is understood from this conversation that the teacher used to impart ahādīth according to their teachers. This method seems to be easy and natural. As the early scholars made their memoranda or books from the lectures of the Companions and the first generation of the Successors, naturally they might have kept the notes of every teacher separately.

1. See for detail supra, p. 41; 50.

2. Supra Ibn 'Abbās, and 'Urwah, in the third chapter.

3. See the revising of Shu'bah and Ibn Idrīs, Rāzī, ii, i, 112.

4. See for example: Abū Zur'ah, Jāmi', 109a; Ibn Mahdī, Jāmi', 108b; Ibn al-Mubārak, Jāmi', 109a.

5. Tahd., i, 358.

The description of books available to us at present makes the matter quite clear. Here are a few examples:

Mujāhid says, "I went to Ḥammād b. 'Amr and requested him to bring the book of Khuṣaif. Then he brought the book of Ḥuṣain"¹.

Al-Qawāriri says that he went to 'Abd al-Wārith, accompanied by 'Affān. 'Abd al-Wārith enquired of them what they wanted. Then they asked him to bring the book of Ibn Juḥādah².

Once al-Thaurī said that he would bring the book of the best man of al-Kūfah. The students thought that he meant the book of Maṣṣūr, but he produced the book of Muḥammad b. Sūqah³.

Ibn Ḥanbal discussed a ḥadīth which was transmitted on the authority of Ibrāhīm from Hushaim from Ya'lā b. 'Aṭā', so he asked al-Athram to go to 'Abd Allāh b. Mūsā and to look up in his book this particular ḥadīth as he had heard that it was noted there. Al-Athram said that he went to the house of 'Abd Allāh b. Mūsā, and his books from Hushaim were brought to him. He then searched the books of Hushaim, in particular for the ḥadīth of Ya'lā, but did not find it. He further said that he found the ahādīth of Ya'lā in the books of Hushaim in one place, and in that there was no reference to the *ḥadīth*⁴ for which he was looking.

There are a good many references which give sufficient ground to maintain that the general practice of the teaching of ḥadīth was to impart ahādīth of one Shaikh at one time, and to keep ahādīth of every Shaikh separately⁵.

The Method of Teaching.

For the teaching of aḥādīth, the following systems were generally employed:

Oral recitation,
reading from books,
questions and answers,
dictation.

A. Oral recitation of aḥādīth by the teacher. This practice began to decline from the second half of the second century, though it persisted to a much lesser extent for a long period. Mostly students were attached to a certain teacher for a very long time, until they were believed to be authorities on his adādhīth. Sometimes they were called Rāwī or Sāhib of so and so¹. Even if regular meetings were held for the teaching, only a few aḥādīth were taught in one lesson, say about three or four².

B. Reading from books.

1. *Reading by the teacher, from his own book*¹, which was much more preferred.

2. Reading by the teacher from the student's book, which was either a copy² or a selection from his own work³. This method had a great many pitfalls for the teachers who did not memorize their aḥādīth. Many students and scholars played tricks, inserting aḥādīth here and there into the teacher's aḥādīth and handing the book to the teacher for reading, to examine the soundness of his knowledge and memory. Failing to recognise the additional material, they were denounced and were declared untrustworthy⁴.

3. Reading to the teacher. Another method was that the book was read by the students⁵ or by a certain man called

"Qārī"¹, and other students compared these ahādīth with their books or only listened attentively. Later they copied the books.

It seems that this was the most common practice from the beginning of the second century. In this case copies were provided by the teachers themselves² as many of them had their own scribes, Kātib or *Warrāq*³, or students had their own books, copied earlier from the original or from another copy of the same work⁴.

Therefore it seems that it was a common practice of the time to provide copies, otherwise he would not have made this remark against Habīb. It looks as if they had spare copies of their works, see, e.g.:

D. Dictating the ahādīth. Apart from the Prophet's dictations¹ and his early Companions' infrequent dictations of *ahādīth*², perhaps Wāthilah b. Asqa' (d. 83) was the first who held classes for dictation³. This method was not encouraged in the early days, because in this way a man was able to gather much knowledge in a very short time without much effort. It seems that al-Zuhri was the first to depart from this attitude. About the end of the first century we find him dictating ahādīth, a method which he followed during the rest of his life⁴.

There were certain extremists who disliked dictating or did not allow writing down⁵, and there were others who did not transmit ahādīth until the students wrote them down⁶. Some of them even refused to dictate ahādīth if the students used wooden boards for writing, because they could erase it⁷. There were some others who wrote down ahādīth and after memorizing, wiped them out⁸. Others used to learn by heart and after memorizing wrote them down⁹. It seems, after comparing with the other methods of the teaching of ahādīth, that these were rare and uncommon practices. From the second century onwards, besides the usual method of or from memory¹. In some cases the students refused to write ahādīth while being dictated from memory², yet it seems that it was the fashion of the time to rely on memory in transmitting or dictating *ahādīth*³. Perhaps it was a matter of prestige and reputation. This practice resulted in many mistakes owing to the inherent deficiencies of memory⁴. They had to go through their books to refresh their memories, and in many cases when they were uncertain they did not dictate⁵.

The Mustamlīs.

The dictation method, due to large audiences, gave rise to a new type of work for certain people who were called Mustamlīs. They used to repeat the words of the Shaikh in a loud voice to the audience⁶.

Selection of a Writer.

As all the students could not write rapidly, sometimes a fast writer was chosen to take down *ahādīth*¹, while others watched him writing, lest he should make any mistake². Later, either they borrowed the books or copied them in the presence of the owner³. In the literary circle a class of scribes or Warrāqūn was found for the purpose of copying, which gave rise to the trade in books⁴.

The employment of scribes for writing ahādīth.

The early record of employment of people to write down or to sell a book on ahādīth, goes back to the later days of the Umayyad dynasty².

The correction of written copies.

It seems that the scholars were aware of the importance of revision after copying³.

After copying or dictating, the copies were corrected either by the students with each other's⁴ or under the supervision of their masters⁵.

Wooden boards seem to have been used mostly for writing dictations and taking notes, and fair copies were made later¹. Sometimes abridged words were used to save time and space².

Students: their ages.

First, they learned the Qur'ān, mostly by heart. Many scholars used to examine new students in the *Qur'ān*³. They also learned some other subjects such as Islamic Law, religious practices, grammar, etc. Usually they joined Muḥaddithīn's circles around the age of twenty⁴.

4. Students in the time of the Successors were about twenty years of age

Education in ahādīth was free. Only a few scholars charged some money but they were denounced for this practice.

The students' relations with their teachers were based on reverence and respect. Some of them used to help or serve their tutors¹, but there were tutors who did not accept any kind of service, lest it might be taken as service in return for teaching².

In many cases the teachers helped their students financially³, and it was quite common to offer meals to them⁴. An odd phenomenon of the education in hadīth was the continuous traveling of students and scholars to collect ahādīth. Perhaps journeying was an essential part of studentship. Al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī wrote when they started learning traditions; Rāmḥurmuzī, 6a.

Zuhri said about Ibn 'Uyaynah that he was the youngest student he had ever seen, and was fifteen years old. Rāmḥurmuzī, 6a;

Al-Dabārī transmitted 'Abd al-Razzāq's book, and when 'Abd al-Razzāq died he was not more than 7 years old (Kifāyah, 64). It was said that if a child could discriminate between a cow and a donkey he could start learning traditions (Kifāyah, 65). It was at the time when the texts were fixed, and learning meant transmission of a book through Isnād 'Alī. On the other hand, especially in the second century, many scholars were weakened in their traditions from certain teachers on the grounds of their youth at the time when they wrote down from them; e.g. 'Amr al-Bairūtī is weak in the traditions of al-Auzā'ī as he was young when he wrote down from him (Rāzī, iii, i, 268; Mizān, iii, 290). See for similar charges against Ibn al-Madīnī in Mizān, iii, 82.; against Ibn Abū Shaibah, Mizān, iii, 82; and against Hishām b. Ḥassān, Kifāyah, 54.

a book on this subject, and the biographies of Muḥaddithīn are full of the stories of their journeys, but this subject is not a part of the present study.

The Number of Students.

There are references to hundreds of teachers from whom al-Thaurī, Ibn al-Mubārak, al-Zuhri, etc. had written down ahādīth. In the works of biographers we find a long list of teachers and students of eminent scholars. As an example, let us take only one scholar, al-Zuhri. We do not know precisely how many students wrote from him, and how many attended his lectures. However, we have at least fifty references to his students who made their written collections from him¹. The growing number of transmitters resulted in the tremendous growth of ahādīth. The books grew so voluminous that it was difficult to handle them.

Therefore, to avoid chaos and discrepancies, Shu'bah advised writing the famous ahādīth through a reference to the famous scholars². Nevertheless, the numbers of a few thousand ahādīth reached about three quarters of a million in the mid third century.

Many modern scholars — being unaware of the nature of this material — were perplexed by their immense number, and thus reached very strange conclusions. In Appendix No. II, there is a detailed discussion to clarify this issue.

School buildings.

From the very days of the Prophet, mosques were used as schools³, a practice which still persists in the Muslim world. There are references occasionally to Kuttāb or Maktab, or to the houses which were used as schools⁴, yet it does not seem that separate buildings were built for this purpose in the early days.

The classes were usually held in mosques, sometimes in teacher's houses and sometimes, if the numbers of the audiences were very great, in a public place⁵.

CHAPTER V

THE BOOK

Material for Writing.

At first the Qur'ān was recorded on scraps of parchment, leather, tablets of stone, ribs of palm branches, camel ribs and shoulder-blades and pieces of wooden board¹. Qirtās, papyrus, was known to Arabs even before Islam. The word Qirtās is used in the *Qur'ān*² and even in pre-Islamic poetry³. It is not clear whether or not this material was utilized in the very early days for the recording of the Qur'ān or ḥadīth. There are, however, references to papyri which came into use after the conquest of Egypt. As early as 35 A.H., there is a reference to Bait al-Qirtās as an annexe to the house of Caliph 'Uthmān⁴.

Leather and papyrus were usually used in the early days and gradually paper replaced them to a large extent. Whether or not paper was known to the Arabs in the early days of Islam is disputable. According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, paper was introduced for the first time into the Islamic world after the conquest of Samarqand through Chinese slaves⁵. Ibn al-Nadīm, however, mentions that he himself saw a book written on Khurāsānī paper belonging to a very early period of Islam⁶. Yet he is not sure and gives a contradictory statement later in his book⁷. According to Shaikh 'Ināyatullah, "The Chinese paper was imported by the Arab traders engaged in maritime trade with the Far East; but the introduction of the art of paper-making itself into the Muslim world is due to an accident of war"¹. Unfortunately he does not give any reference in support of his statement. However, at the end of the second century, paper was used even in Egypt, the homeland of papyrus, for writing purposes².

It looks as if loose sheets of papyrus were used for writing in early days. The Companion Shamghūn is reported to be the first who wrote on both sides of papyrus, and pressed them and sewed them together³. It does not mean that the practice of loose sheets came to an end. There are many references, even in later periods, where unsewn sheets are mentioned⁴.

As for the shape of the book, we find, besides the words Kitāb and Ṣuḥuf, the words *Daftar*⁵, *Kurrāsah*⁶ and *Dīwān*⁷. Words like Daftar, Dīwān, Kurrāsah, Ṣahīfah, Kitāb, express, perhaps, the flat shape of the written material something like a book in its form, while words like *Tūmār*⁸ and *Darj*⁹, which are also found in references, express the form of scrolls.

Qalqashandī says that Darj المستطيل الورق العام means the compound of many parts joined together in the general usage. المركب من عدة اوصال ... عشرين وصلا متلاصقة لاغير. means a rectangular paper consisting of joined pieces¹⁰. In his own time it contained twenty pieces of paper stuck together. Therefore, most probably, it was kept in the form of a scroll.

The Method of Writing on Paper.

In early days, the scholars had every teacher's ahādīth in separate books or sheets or whatever it might be. In this case they used to note some information about the narrator. Once Abū Zur'ah said that the books of Ibn Ḥanbal did not contain information about the scholars from whom he had heard on the first pages, while Abū Zur'ah himself, could not manage without such information¹.

It seems that the complete isnād was introduced only in the very beginning of the book. In the following part of the book every ḥadīth was written with only higher part of isnād, or the isnāds were eliminated altogether leaving only the material. By this method they economized time, space and labour. There is, however, an example of quite a different type. Muḥammad b. Kathīr al-Miṣṣīṣī had a book from al-Auza'i in which he wrote the complete isnād with every ḥadīth, even including his own name. Al-Dhahabī described this method as foolish². The description of Ismā'il b. Abū Khālīd's books which was in the hands of Ibn Ḥanbal shows that they mostly used only the earlier authorities of the isnāds in the middle of the book³. This saved the scholars space and time, but it had some disadvantages. The full isnād was given on the top of the page or scroll, and every transmission of the book from one transmitter to another demanded an extra entry, not at the bottom but right on the top. As the papers or papyri were brittle, the upper portion easily wore out, so that students in many cases were unable to know whose ahādīth those were. Likewise, one often finds references to the mixing of ahādīth, e.g., Jarīr b. 'Abd al-Ḥamīd mixed up books of 'Aṣim and Ash'ath⁴. The same was the case in the books which were set in order by Ibn 'Uyaynah⁵. Abū Ṣāliḥ, the scribe of al-Laith, brought a Darj - tell from whom those ahādīth were related. He was told that those were the ahādīth of Ibn Abū Dhī'b⁶. An incident of this nature is also reported about Khālīd al-'Abd where the name of the final authority was erased⁷.

Al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī says that the scholars have many famous Nusakh, each of which contains a number of ahādīth. The students could transmit a single ḥadīth from anywhere in the book giving a complete isnād as it was mentioned in the first *ḥadīth*¹. Ibn Ma'in was asked whether or not it was allowed to write down the complete isnād with every ḥadīth, with reference to the ahādīth of Warqā' from Ibn Abū Najīh from Mujāhid, where the complete isnād was given in the beginning of the book. Yaḥyā replied, "It is right"². Wakī' was asked a similar question: a teacher said at the beginning of the book "Sufyān from Manṣūr," and later he only said "from Manṣūr"; now, is it right to say the complete isnād with each ḥadīth. He replied it was correct to do so³.

Diacritical signs, dotting and other kinds of punctuation.

Some students were said to be perfect in the copying of books. Their books were quite clear, full of dots and other necessary notes of clarification⁴, while some others were careless in dotting and other signs. Such imperfections in copying caused many mistakes (Taṣhīf) in reading.

Once Ibn Ḥanbal was asked whether Abū al-Walīd was a perfect narrator. Ibn Ḥanbal replied, "No, his book had neither dots nor diacritical signs, but he was skilled in the ahādīth of Shu'bah"⁵.

This is a very important statement. It shows that in judging a man, at least sometimes, they used to notice his writing as well.

Other Signs.

To separate one ḥadīth from the other, they made a small circle instead of a full stop. This kind of inscription is found at the beginning of the second century, e.g., the book of Abū al-Zinād from al-A'raj⁶. In the book of Ibn Sīrīn we find a circle after every ten *aḥādīth*¹. Students used to copy books before attending the lecture of their teachers². Therefore, when a ḥadīth was read to them in class they put an "okay" mark on it. In many cases they listened to certain aḥādīth more than once, hence they put different signs and various numbers of dots to show the number of times the traditions were read³. Khālīd b. 'Abd Allāh al-Ṭaḥḥān wrote aḥādīth and could not read them to the authority. Later, when his son began to impart them he was told, "Even your father did not hear these aḥādīth"⁴.

Theft of Material.

Since in those days there was no system of copyright, material from any book could be utilized in composing a book or imparting aḥādīth, but it was against the literary custom of the period.

Every student, before utilizing any verbal or written material, had to obtain it through proper channel - isnād - otherwise it was thought to be forgery or theft of material. There are many references to men said to be *Sāriq al-Hadīth*⁵.

Adding External Material in the Body of a Book.

Most of the people who listened to aḥādīth and copied them out had their own books. Students felt at liberty to include additional material even in a fixed text to clarify some obscure word, or their own opinion or some such thing. As any additional material would have a completely different isnād or the name of the inserter, there was no danger of spoiling the text. In Appendix IV of this book there appears a very explicit and clear example of this sort⁶, wherein the copyist added two lines even before completing the sentences. There is another example of Abū Sa'id, the transmitter of the book Al-Muḥabbar, where he adds two lines⁷.

There is clear evidence of this nature in Ṣaḥīḥ of al-Bukhārī, where al-Firabrī adds extraneous material, giving his *isnād*¹.

Books and the Problems of Authorship.

The problem of the authorship of works compiled in the early days is common to all literature. This phenomenon is found in Jewish and Christian literatures as well². But Islamic literature gives a definite ascription to all the documents, in contrast with many other scriptures, where it is difficult to find the reference to the source³.

Muslim writers, as a matter of preference and style, referred to the author, rather than to the works⁴, a practice which persisted for centuries. A close examination of Muwatta' of Mālik b. Anas and his material incorporated in later books reveals this method. The method was not confined to ḥadīth literature; it was applied even to history and other Arabic literatures in general. In short, all literature used the same pattern of Muḥaddithīn in transmitting knowledge. For example, we take one statement from Tabaqāt Khalīfah b. Khayyāt (240) from which al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī frequently quotes⁵. We find him quoting from the book, and referring to the author, giving full isnād going back to Khalīfah, but not mentioning the name of the work. We can trace this system in the entire product of Muslim literature. In the early days, it appears that if they utilized some material without receiving it through proper isnād, they referred to the book without giving the *isnād*⁶.

In many cases even when they referred to a title, they were not so precise in giving the authorship. For instance Maghāzī of Ibn

6. Al-Azdī, Tārīkh al-Mausil, 174; 177; Khaithamah, iii, 147a.

Ishāq is a well-known work. The book was transmitted by a number of transmitters. One of the transmitters was Salamah b. al-Faḍl al-Abrash. In many cases the work was attributed to him, as he was the transmitter of the work. Yahyā b. Maʿīn says, "There is a man in Baghdād called Ibrāhīm b. Muṣʿab who transmits Kitāb of Salamah from Ibn Ishāq"¹. يحدث بكتاب سلمة عن محمد بن اسحاق. The same scholar Yahyā in another statement describes Salamah b. al-Faḍl as a trustworthy man. Yahyā himself had written on his authority, and his books on the Maghāzī were most complete and there was no book more complete than his².

It would be useful to add one more statement in this connection, as it concerns the same man, Ibrāhīm b. Muṣʿab. It reads thus "Ibrāhīm b. Muṣʿab transmitted the book of Ibn Ishāq from Salamah b. al-Faḍl"³.

Now it is clear that the work actually belongs to Ibn Ishāq. At some time it was attributed to Salamah as he was his transmitter, and at another time to the real author.

The commentary of Mujāhid on the Qurʾān is a well-known work⁴. Ibn Abī Najīh was one of the transmitters of this book⁵ from whom Warqāʾ transmitted it⁶.

Once when Yahyā was asked whether he preferred the commentary of Warqāʾ or of Shaibān, he replied that he preferred the commentary of Warqāʾ because it was transmitted from Ibn Abī Najīh from Mujāhid⁷.

The same book was attributed to Ibn Abū Najīh in the statement of Ibn Ḥanbal⁸. Thus it becomes clear in this statement that the work belonged to Mujāhid, but it was attributed to Ibn Abū Najīh as he was the transmitter of the works and sometimes was even attributed to the Warqāʾ as he was the second man in the chain of transmitters.

Here is the last, but not least important example of this kind. Sharḥ al-Mufaddaliyyāt belongs to al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad al-

Anbārī and was erroneously attributed to his son. — C. J. Lyall states in the introduction to Sharḥ al-Mufaddaliyyāt, "The preface to our edition states clearly that the commentary is to be regarded as the work of Abū Muḥammad al-Qāsim (b. Muḥammad b. Bash-shār) al-Anbārī; and this is placed beyond doubt by the colophon of the Leipzig fragment, which is reproduced at the end of the text, p. 884. Notwithstanding this, the commentary is generally cited under the name of the son, Abū Bakr Muḥammad, commonly known as Ibn al-Anbārī (so in the Fihrist, p. 75, the Khizānah, Ḥajjī Kalīfah, the Lisān al-ʿArab and the Tāj al-ʿArūs). The preface shows that this is a mistake. The son's function was merely to publish what had been compiled by his father, occasionally adding a note by his own hand"¹.

Summing up, it was the style of the period that they mostly referred to the author, and not to the work. In many cases one work was attributed to more than one person: to the real author, to the first transmitter of the book, and even to the second transmitter.

In this connection, L. Zolondek's approach is very sound where he says, "I strongly suspect that a work of Ibn Ḥabīb which has an almost identical title, Kitāb man summiya bi Baytain qālahū (F. 106, 28-29) was nothing else than a second of Ibn al-Kalbī's works . . . It would seem that the works listed for these transmitters with identical titles are not really independent works, but mere editions of the earlier works of their teachers"². In the present research, not a single reference has been made where the book is attributed to one of the teachers of the real compiler, or any higher authority.

Schacht and the Authenticity of Mūsā b. ʿUqbah's authorship of Maghāzī.

At this stage, it is worthwhile looking at the Kitāb al-Magʿ by Mūsā b. ʿUqbah. We do not know at the moment of an independent copy of Mūsā's work. It is either in the form of c in the works of historians like Ṭabarī, Balādhurī³, or in the form of extracts which were published by Sachau⁴ of Ibn al-Ṣāʿid.

In his article on Mūsā b. 'Uqbah's Kitāb al-Maghāzī, J. Schacht discusses the authorship of the work¹. In his words, "Mūsā claimed that he derived his information from Zuhri . . . Yahyā b. Ma'in (d. 233) regarded the work of Mūsā b. 'Uqbā which is derived from Zuhri, as one of the most correct of these books on Maghāzī . . . It is therefore unlikely that the Kitāb al-Maghāzī in its original form contained traditions from authorities other than Zuhri" . . . [but it has additional material Nos. 8, 9, 10 and 19, and so it seems] to be additions made to the original work . . .² About the remaining material he says, "Mūsā himself had ascribed to Zuhri traditions which he could not possibly have received from him . . .³" "These additions may have been made either by Ismā'il b. Ibrāhīm b. 'Uqba, or by the next transmitter of the text . . .⁴", . . . "Ismā'il, and it is safe to assume that Ismā'il was its only transmitter⁵". Bukhārī's transmission of Nos. 5 and 6 through Muḥammad b. Fulaiḥ does not prove that the Maghāzī was transmitted from Mūsā to Bukhārī in this way, but only two stories from K. al-Maghāzī were transmitted to him⁶. The names of Mūsā's teachers and students grew in number as the number of spurious isnāds and traditions grew⁷. Therefore, the whole standard biography of Mūsā in the later works is without documentary value⁸. In this respect he advises us to compare the standard biographies of Mūsā with the relevant entries in Ibn Sa'd and Bukhārī's *Tārīkh*⁹.

It appears, therefore, that we are not on solid ground about the authorship of the Maghāzī of Mūsā. What is necessary to discuss at the moment is not the authenticity and trustworthiness of Mūsā, but the authorship of the Maghāzī. It seems that all the difficulties about the relevant document come from Schacht's adherence to only one statement of Ibn Ma'in with his arbitrary comments, while he ignores or overlooks all the other statements. Let us see the references to Mūsā's Maghāzī. Mālik b. Anas, who died some fifty-five years earlier than Yahyā b. Ma'in, refers to the Maghāzī without mentioning al-Zuhri¹. Ibn Ma'in refers to Mūsā's adaptation of al-Zuhri² which means that Mūsā depended to a large extent on al-Zuhri. The wording of Ibn Ma'in does not confine his sources to al-Zuhri. Therefore, any material in this book coming from sources other than al-Zuhri belongs entirely to Mūsā. Schacht thinks that when Mūsā relates from Nāfi' or Sālim or others, al-Zuhri is invariably the intermediary between Mūsā and these persons³. But why should it be so? If we accept the statement that Mūsā saw Ibn 'Umar (d. 74) — and we have no reason to reject it — still giving him a normal life of sixty-five years, he must have been born about 75-80, since he died about 140⁴.

Sālim (d. 106), Nāfi' (d. 117) and Mūsā all belong to Madīnah and at the time of the deaths of Sālim and Nāfi', Mūsā should have been at least between 26 and 37 years, and, according to the biographers, he was 40-55 years old. What sound reason, then, do we have to think that he could not get direct information from these authorities and must have obtained it from al-Zuhri? Was there any custom that restricted learning to one teacher, to the exclusion of all others, or were Nāfi' and Sālim worthy of less respect than al-Zuhri, so that Mūsā ignored them? In the circumstances, the claim that Mūsā was not the author of the work appears baseless. It is worthwhile noting that Mūsā had Nāfi's traditions in writing to which Ibn al-Mubārak was witness⁵. The statement that the work was transmitted only through his nephew is a mere assumption and contrary to the fact.

When Bukhārī transmits through Muḥammad b. Fulaiḥ, it could be suggested — as Schacht did — that he transmitted only two stories. Unfortunately for Schacht's theory, al-Ṭabarānī has preserved quotations from the book explicitly through Muḥammad b. Fulaiḥ⁶. Other quotations are preserved by Balādhurī in *Ansāb al-Ashraf*⁷ where immediate narrators from Mūsā are Wuhaib, al-Darāwardī and al-Mundhir b. 'Abd Allāh. Some further quotations could be provided from the Annales of al-Ṭabarī. Therefore, on what reasonable grounds can one suggest that Ismā'il was the only narrator! One makes no sense by trying to cast doubt on the names of Mūsā's authorities or his students provided by his standard biographer on the basis of al-Bukhārī's Tārīkh and Ibn Sa'd's work. Have these two authors taken any responsibility to record all the names? In spite of the value of these books, they have their own limitations, e.g., Ibn Sa'd describes Maghāzī of Abān b. 'Uthmān, not in the biography of Abān but somewhere else¹. Ibn Sa'd utilized the History of Abū Ma'shar, but did not mention the work in Abū Ma'shar's biography and devoted only three lines to him².

Here are other examples from Ibn Sa'd and Bukhārī's works pertaining to the ahādīth of earlier scholars.

Two eminent scholars of the mid-second century of the Hijrah, Shu'bah (d. 160) and Sufyān al-Thaurī (d. 161) are described in both the works.

Ibn Sa'd (d. 230) gives only nine lines — in the printed edition — for the biography of Shu'bah³ and over two pages for Sufyān al-Thaurī⁴, omitting all the references to the earlier's teachers and students and providing only two names of the latter's teachers and about ten names of his students; while Bukhārī (d. 256), describing Shu'bah as امير المؤمنين في الحديث devoted only eight lines⁵, giving three or four names of his teachers and about the same number for his students. For Sufyān he has devoted almost one page⁶ — in the printed edition — naming four or five persons each as his teachers and students.

Ibn Ḥanbal (d. 241), on the other hand, gives about 150 names as teachers of Shu'bah. Furthermore, he gives forty-five names from whom Shu'bah alone transmitted and ninety-seven names for Sufyān as such⁷.

Between the deaths of Ibn Sa'd and Ibn Ḥanbal on the one hand, and the deaths of Ibn Sa'd and al-Bukhārī on the other, there are respectively 11 and 15 years. According to Schacht's theory the names of Mūsā's teachers and students grew in number as the number of spurious isnāds and traditions grew¹. If the spurious isnāds and traditions grew so quickly in a span of eleven years that the number of Shu'bah's teachers increased from one or zero to 150, then what process was utilized by Bukhārī to check the growth and to reduce the numbers of the spurious authorities to four only? Therefore, the theory of forgery basing itself on the entries of Bukhārī and Ibn Sa'd is without justification.

It would be sufficient to look only at the 'prologue' of al-Sakhāwī's Historiography to know that every city had its book or books of biographies², beginning with a small volume and rising to eighty volumes. The later writers were able to utilize all these materials and were capable of producing more comprehensive biographies. None of them intended or claimed to furnish all the information available to them.

CHAPTER VI

ISNĀD

THE BEGINNING OF ISNĀD.

Isnād seems to have been used casually in some literatures in the Pre-Islamic period, in a vague manner, without attaching any importance to it¹. The isnād system was also used — to some extent — in transmitting pre-Islamic poetry². But it was in the Hadīth literature that its importance culminated till it was counted a part of the religion³. The advantage of the system was utilized to the full, and in some cases to extravagant limits, for documenting the Hadīth literature, the storehouse of the Sunnah. The Sunnah of the Prophet being a basic legal source, it was natural to deal with these documents with utmost care. Thus with the introduction of isnād, a unique science, ‘Ilm al-Jarh wa al-Ta’dil — the knowledge of invalidating and declaring reliable — came into existence for the valuation of isnād and ahādīth.

The Beginning of Isnād in Hadīth Literature.

We have seen in the fourth chapter that it was the common practice among Companions — even during the life of the Prophet — to transmit the traditions of the Prophet. Some of them had made special arrangements to attend the Prophet's circle by turns and to inform each other of what they had heard and seen in the presence of the Prophet⁴.

3. MU, introduction, pp. 14-16.
4. Supra, pp. 183-4.

In informing their fellows they would have naturally used sentences like 'the Prophet did so and so' or 'the Prophet said so and so'. It is also natural that one of them who had gained knowledge at second hand, while reporting the incident to a third man, might have disclosed his sources of information and might have given the full account of the incident. There are ample references of this kind in the Hadīth literature.

These methods, which were used in the early days for the diffusion of the Sunnah of the Prophet, gave birth to isnād, and were the rudimentary beginning of this system.

An important early statement about Isnād.

Ibn Sīrīn (d. 110) says, "They did not ask about the isnād, but when civil war — Fitnah — broke they said 'Name to us your men'; those who belong to Ahl al-Sunnah, their traditions were accepted and those who were innovators their traditions were neglected"¹.

This statement gives the impression that the isnād were used even before the Fitnah, but the narrators were not so particular in applying it. Sometimes they employed it and, at others, neglected it; but, after civil war, they became more cautious and began to enquire about the sources of information and scrutinize them. At the end of the first century the science of the isnād was fully developed. Shu'bah used to watch the lips of Qatādah, in the lecture, to discriminate between his first and second-hand information². There are ample references to asking and enquiring about the isnād in the first century of the *Hijrah*³.

Orientalists and Isnād.

Among the orientalists there have been differences of opinion about the beginning of isnād. According to Caetani, 'Urwah (d. 94), the oldest systematic collector of traditions, as quoted by Ṭabarī, used no isnāds and quoted no authority but the Qur'ān. Caetani, therefore, holds that in the time of 'Abd al-Malik (c. 70-80), more than sixty years after the Prophet's death, the practice of giving isnād did not exist. So, he concludes that the beginning of the isnād system may be placed in the period between 'Urwah and Ibn Ishāq (d. 151). In his opinion the greater part of the isnād was put together and created by traditionists belonging to the end of the second century, and perhaps also by those belonging to the third¹.

Sprenger has also pointed out that the writing of 'Urwah to 'Abd al-Malik does not contain isnād and it was only later that he was credited with it².

The quotations from the writing of 'Urwah to 'Abd al-Malik are preserved not only in Ṭabarī but in many classical collections of Hadīth as well³ which are earlier than Ṭabarī. In one of the quotations, through the same isnād which is utilized by Ṭabarī, we find 'Urwah quoting his authority 'Ā'ishah⁴. The main difficulty which arises in searching for the sources of 'Urwah is the lack of original work existing in a separate form. The available material is only in the form of quotations. It was left to later scholars to quote certain lines from the work as they were wanted. 'Urwah had personal contact with most of the Companions so his authority must have been a single name or the very person who was present at the incident. Hence, the isnād consisted of a single name. And it is easy to omit or overlook a single man's name in quoting. The other versions of his work, especially the one transmitted by Zuhri, have isnāds. 'Urwah even uses composite *isnāds*⁵ in the writing, as well as the single one.

Horovitz, who has studied the problem of isnād, has answered the arguments of Caetani and other scholars thoroughly in his article *Alter und Ursprung des Isnād*⁶. He points out that those who denied the use of isnād by 'Urwah did not notice all his isnāds. Furthermore he argues that there is a difference between what one writes when one is asked questions and what one does within learned circles. His conclusion is that the first entry of the isnād into the literature of tradition was in the last third of the first century¹. But as 'Urwah also uses composite isnāds, the use of single isnād in writing must have been earlier than this period and the use of the single isnād in oral transmission of traditions much earlier than that.

A Scottish scholar, J. Robson, who has studied the subject at some length, says, "It is during the middle years of the first century of Islam that one would first expect anything like an isnād. By then many of the Companions were dead, and people who had not seen the Prophet would be telling stories about him. It might therefore naturally occur to some to ask these men for their authority. The growth of a hard and fast system must have been very gradual"². He concludes, "We know that Ibn Ishāq, in the first half of the second century, could give much of his information without an isnād, and much of the remainder without a perfect one. His predecessors would almost certainly be even less particular than he in documenting their information. But we are not justified in assuming that the isnād is a development of Zuhri's period and was unknown to 'Urwah. While the developed system had a slow growth, some element of isnād would be present from as early a period as people could demand it"³.

Professor Schacht and Isnād.

Recently Schacht has dealt with the legal traditions and their development. In his opinions isnāds are the most arbitrary part of traditions. They were developed within certain groups who traced back their doctrines to early authorities⁴. Commenting on Schacht's criticism, Professor Robson says, "The criticism levelled at the isnāds is very thoroughgoing, and some strong arguments are brought forward to suggest that the use of isnāds is a late development: but one hesitates to accept it to the full extent... Schacht is dealing primarily with legal traditions, a sphere where his argument may apply more closely than elsewhere, as changing conditions and the development of legal thought must have demanded new regulations; but one wonders whether the argument is not too sweeping"⁵.

Schacht's approach to the subject and its weakness will be discussed later on. At the moment only one of his statements requires immediate attention. He says, "It is stated on the authority of the Successor Ibn Sīrīn that the demand for and the interest in isnāds started from the civil war (Fitna), when people could no longer be presumed to be reliable without scrutiny; we shall see later that the civil war which began with the killing of the Umayyad Caliph Walīd b. Yazīd (A. H. 126), towards the end of the Umayyad dynasty, was a conventional date for the end of the good old time during which the Sunna of the Prophet was still prevailing; as the usual date for the death of Ibn Sīrīn is A. H. 110, we must conclude that the attribution of this statement to him is spurious. In any case, there is no reason to suppose that the regular practice of using isnāds is older than the beginning of the second century A.H.¹" But his whole argument is based on his arbitrary interpretation of the word Fitnah. The assassination date of Walīd b. Yazīd has never been a conventional date in Islamic history and was never reckoned as the end of the "good old time". This title is given only to the Period of four righteous Caliphs.

Furthermore, there were many Fitnahs before this date. There was the civil war between Ibn al-Zubair and 'Abd al-Mālik b. Marwān about 70 A.H. But the biggest of all was the civil war between 'Alī and Mu'āwiyah, which produced a breach among Muslims which exists to the present day. Ṭāhā Ḥusain has described it rightly as the most fierce quarrel known in Islamic History². «وحين إختص المسلمون حولها اعنف خصومة عرفها تاريخها»

So, on what grounds does the word Fitnah need to be interpreted in the sense of the civil war after the killing of Walīd b. Yazīd? To take the word arbitrarily in this sense is equal to interpreting it as the Fitnah of Tartar and Halaku. Schacht takes this word in the sense which suits him, without any historical justification, to prove his own theory. This, of course, is logically absurd.

Professor Robson inclines to take the word in the sense of the Fitnah of Ibn al-Zubair, considering the birth date of Ibn Sīrīn, as well as the occurrence of the word Fitnah, in the text of Muwatta' Mālik which refers to this period³. The present research indicates that it should be taken back to the first and the most dangerous civil war in the history of Islam. For this suggestion, there are the following reasons:

1. Professor Robson has pointed out that at the middle of the first century, when many of the Companions were dead and people who had not seen the Prophet would be telling the story of the Prophet, someone would naturally ask them to name the authority. If we accept the status of the Prophet as it is shown in Robson's statement — which is quite unfair — this is possibly what might have occurred.

Yet before reaching this stage, there was a great upheaval in the fourth decade. Most likely, the first fabrication of traditions began in the political sphere, crediting and discrediting the parties concerned. In the well-known work of Al-Shaukānī, concerning spurious and similar traditions we find:

- 42 spurious traditions about the Prophet
- 38 spurious traditions about the first three Caliphs
- 96 spurious traditions about 'Alī and his wife Fāṭimah
- 14 spurious traditions about Mu'āwiyah¹

Therefore, it looks as if the spurious traditions began to originate for political purposes at and about the period of the war between 'Alī and Mu'āwiyah, and continued later on as a counter-attack on the Umayyad dynasty. The traditionists and other scholars found it necessary from that time onwards to be more cautious in selecting their authorities.

2. The second reason for this assumption is the statement of Ibn Sīrīn itself². There is no reason whatsoever to discredit it and challenge its authenticity. Ibn Sīrīn's wording suggests that he relates a practice earlier than his own period. He uses the words "They did not ask", "they said 'Name to us your men', "were accepted", etc. He does not use the first person of the personal pronoun in a period when its usage was common. So it seems that he points to a practice in very early days. Furthermore, he says 'they did not ask', which implies that the practice of isnād was in existence, but people did not usually inquire, and it was left to the transmitter whether or not to disclose his sources.

Material for the study of Isnād.

Perhaps a lot of confusion in the study of isnād is due to the selection of the material for research of this kind. Professor Robson says: "Horovitz has reminded us that there are three sources for the sayings and doings of the Prophet, viz. Hadīth (Tradition), Sīra (Biography of the Prophet), and Tafsīr (Qur'ān commentary), the ground-element in all being a pronouncement introduced by a chain of witness; and Lammens has rightly insisted the Sīra and Hadīth are not distinct sources, as did Horovitz"¹. So, Professor Robson inclines to accept the view of Lammens, while Horovitz wants to draw a line between Sīrah and Hadīth. Horovitz's approach seems to be much more natural in this context. There is a difference in the very nature of Sīrah (Biography) and the documentation of Hadīth.

In Hadīth any single statement can be put together with any other statement of quite a different subject without causing much perplexity. But Sīrah, being a biography, requires a flow and continuance of episode. Therefore compilers of biography put together their different sources to knit a complete story², while the same authors and the same authorities, when transmitting traditions of other than biographical nature, do not put into practice the biographical method. Therefore, from this angle, there is a difference between Hadīth and Sīrah literature, and so Sīrah is not a proper subject for the study of the system of isnād. Until now most of the research on isnād has been carried out in the biographical literature.

Schacht and the study of Isnād in legal literature.

Schacht has studied the Muwatta' of Mālik, Al-Umm of al-Shāfi'i, Muwatta' of al-Shaibānī, etc., works which belong to legal science. He has imposed the results of his study on the entire Hadīth literature, as if the Hadīth literature does not exist at all and as if it does not have an independent footing of its own.

It seems quite clear that he has not paid much attention to the nature of a legal work. A lawyer, a judge or a Muftī, whenever he gave his verdict, was not bound to give the full documents to support his verdict. When a scholar writes to a certain scholar, he may make only slight allusions to his references, so his colleague can recall the necessary items to his mind.

These were the methods used by the prominent lawyers of the early centuries of Islam. Though most of the writings of that period are not available in separate form, yet we still have a few legal books which belong to the second century A.H. A glance at their methods of quoting traditions would reveal this very fact. Shāfi'i has utilized the material from Muwatta' of Mālik, and Abū Yūsuf has utilized the work of Ibn Ishāq and others. Here are a few examples which show their method in quoting traditions.

But I disliked quoting a Hadīth which I did not memorize well. The above evidence and its implications.

In the writings of early Scholars, mostly in non-tradition literature, the following features are very common:

The cutting of isnāds and their confining to the least possible quotations to serve the purpose, as the complete isnād and ample references would make the work bulky¹.

The omission of the complete isnād and quotation direct from the highest authority².

The use of isnād by Abū Yūsuf reveals that he uses the complete isnād, cuts it off, puts the anonymous word رجل , while he himself has mentioned the exact name a few pages earlier³.

The use of the word Al-Sunnah and other words derived from it to mention the practice of the Prophet, without giving the text or isnād, as the Hadīth in question was well-known to the scholars⁴.

The conclusion.

Summing up the argument, the literature of legal science or the Sīrah work is inadequate for the study of the traditions and isnāds and their 'growth'.

Hadīth is a complete subject by itself with a good many subsidiary branches. It is totally wrong, even unscientific, to study Hadīth as a subject in the legal books. Therefore, any conclusion about the traditions, their transmission, or the isnād system, etc., based on the study of legal literature would be faulty and unreliable.

Flourishing of Isnāds in the later period.

It is the common phenomenon of isnād system that as we go further the number of transmitters increases. Sometimes a tradition transmitted by one companion acquires ten students in the next generation, in the class of Successors and, in their turn, these ten students have in some cases twenty or thirty students belonging to different countries and provinces.

Here are a few examples:

Tradition No. 3 (1).

This tradition is transmitted by at least ten Companions. Available sources at the moment provide some details about the chains of transmission for seven Companions out of ten. These seven Companions belong to three different places:

4 out of 7 Companions who transmitted this Hadīth belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Syria.

2 belong to Iraq.

The Companion Abū Hurairah has at least 7 students who transmit this tradition from him.

4 students out of 7 belong to Madīnah.

2 students belong to Egypt.

1 student belongs to Yemen.

The students who transmitted from these seven students of Abū Hurairah are at least twelve in number.

Their localities are as below:

1 out of 12 belongs to Syria.

5 belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Kūfah.

1 to Makkah.

1 to Ṭā'if.

1 to Egypt.

1 to Yemen.

1. Exm. No. 6; 8-12.

2. Ex. 1-3.

3. Ex. 5.

4. Ex. 8, 9.

1. All the numbers of traditions and the numbers of transmitters refer to the edited work of Suhail which forms Part Two of this dissertation.

If we take other Companions and their students who transmitted this tradition into account, then the number in the second generation goes up to at least sixteen and in the third generation up to at least twenty-six, and their localities are as below:

The Transmitters from the Companions.

9 out of 16 belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Makkah.

2 belong to Egypt.

2 to Baṣrah.

1 to Ḥimṣ.

1 to Yemen.

Those who transmitted in turn from these authorities are twenty-six.

9 out of 26 belong to Madīnah.

4 belong to Makkah.

2 belong to Egypt.

1 to Baṣrah.

1 to Ḥimṣ.

1 to Yemen.

2 to Kūfah.

3 to Syria.

1 to Wāsiṭ.

1 to Ṭā'if.

1 is of a locality unknown to me.

3 of the 26 scholars transmitted from more than one source.

This tradition is quoted by Ibn Hanbal nine times on the authority of Abū Hurairah and thirteen times on the authorities of six other Companions.

Tradition No. 4.

This tradition is transmitted by seven other Companions. These traditions agree with Abū Hurairah's tradition in general.

9 students transmitted this tradition from Abū Hurairah.

5 out of 9 belong to Madīnah.

2 belong to Egypt.

1 to Yemen

One I have been unable to trace

There are ten students who transmitted this tradition from the students of Abū Hurairah.

4 out of 10 belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Egypt.

1 to Yemen.

2 to Kūfah.

1 to Makkah.

1 to Ṭā'if.

The number of transmitters of similar tradition from the different Companions would increase to fourteen and the number of their students to fifteen.

There is only one narrator, Abū Ṣāliḥ, who transmitted from two Companions, 'Ā'ishah and Abū Hurairah. No other student of 'Ā'ishah is known to me who transmitted this tradition from her.

There is only one transmitter, al-Zuhrī, amongst ten who transmitted from two authorities.

Ibn Hanbal has quoted this tradition eight times on the authority of Abū Hurairah.

Tradition No. 7.

At least thirteen students of Abū Hurairah transmitted this tradition from him.

8 out of 13 belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Kūfah.

2 belong to Baṣrah.

1 to Yemen.

1 to Syria.

There are sixteen scholars who transmitted this tradition from the students of Abū Hurairah.

6 out of 16 belong to Madīnah.

4 belong to Baṣrah.

- 2 to Kūfah
- 1 to Makkah.
- 1 to Yemen.
- 1 to Khurāsān.
- 1 to Hims.

Two of these transmitters narrate this tradition from more than one authority. They are al-Zuhri and al-A'mash. The same tradition is transmitted by four other Companions, namely Ibn 'Umar, Jābir, 'Ā'ishah and 'Alī, and taking into account their students, the numbers of the second generation of transmitters increase from thirteen to sixteen and in the third generation from sixteen to eighteen. Some of the students of Abū Hurairah also transmitted the same tradition from other sources than Abū Hurairah.

There is quite a different channel for this tradition in Shi'ite sources.

Ibn Ḥanbal has endorsed this tradition at least fifteen times on the authority of Abū Hurairah.

Tradition No. 8.

This tradition is a lengthy one. A good many scholars have transmitted it in parts. Ibn Ḥanbal has endorsed it at least twenty-four times. It would be tedious to study the complete isnāds and their final shapes in the period of the classical authors. Confining the discussion only to the third generation of narrators of this tradition, who mostly belong to the first half of the second century of the Hijrah, the following feature appears:

Abū Hurairah has at least eleven students who transmitted this tradition, one part or another of it.

The analysis of their homes is as below:

- 9 out of 11 belong to Madīnah.
- 1 to Baṣrah.
- 1 to Kūfah.

They in turn have twenty-two students.

- 9 out of 22 belong to Madīnah.
- 1 belongs to Makkah.

- 4 to Kūfah.
- 5 to Baṣrah.
- 1 to Wāsiṭ.
- 1 to the Hījāz.
- 1 to Khurāsān.

The other feature is that not all the Medinites or Basrites or Kufis are the students of one single man.

Nine Medinites have obtained their knowledge from seven different Medinites.

3 out of 5 Basrites have transmitted from one Basrite.

1 Basrite has transmitted from a Madnite.

1 Basrite has transmitted from another Medinite.

Five of the students of Abū Hurairah have more than one student. The localities of their students are as follows:

1. 1 Abū Ṣāliḥ al-Madanī has five students.
 - 2 out of 5 belong to Madīnah.
 - 1 to Makkah.
 - 2 to Kūfah.
2. Ibn al-Musayyab al-Madanī has four students.
 - 2 out of 4 belong to Madīnah.
 - 1 to Kūfah
 - 1 to Baṣrah.
3. Al-Maqburī has two students:
 - One from Madīnah and the other from the Hījāz. His precise city is unknown to me.
4. Muḥammad b. Ziyād al-Madanī has three students.
 - one each from Baṣrah, Wāsiṭ, and Khurāsān.
5. Ibn Sīrīn al-Baṣrī has three students.
 - All of them from Baṣrah.

In later parts of the isnād the localities of the narrators would appear more and more mixed and from different provinces.

There are at least seven other Companions who have transmitted this tradition from the Prophet. If their transmitters are added to Abū Hurairah's transmitters, the number would increase.

This single tradition of Abū Hurairah is endorsed by Ibn Ḥanbal at least twenty-four times.

Furthermore, the tradition is preserved in the collections of A'mash (d. 148), Ibn Juraij (d. 150), and Ibrāhīm b. Ṭahmān (d. 168), who are transmitters of this tradition from the students of Abū Hurairah.

The same tradition is found in Shi'ite, Zaidī, and Ibādī sources.

Tradition No. 10.

This tradition is transmitted by only two students of Abū Hurairah and each of them has only one student. There are eight other Companions who transmit this tradition from the Prophet. The number of the students of all these Companions reaches twenty and they in turn have twenty-five students of different provinces. This tradition is endorsed by Ibn Ḥanbal only once on the authority of Abū Hurairah.

Tradition No. 11.

This tradition is transmitted by only one student of Abū Hurairah. He is Abū Ṣāliḥ, who has only one student, his son Suhail who in turn has four students. This tradition is endorsed by Ibn Ḥanbal three times on the authority of Abū Hurairah.

No other transmitter of this tradition is traceable. Perhaps, Abū Hurairah is the only one who transmitted this tradition from the Prophet.

Tradition No. 27.

There are nine students who transmitted this tradition from Abū Hurairah.

6 out of 9 belong to Madīnah.

1 to Baṣrah.

1 to Makkah.

1 to Syria.

Their students in turn reach twelve.

6 out of 12 belong to Madīnah.

1 belongs to Yamāmah.

1 to Tustar.

1 to Baṣrah.

1 to Syria.

1 is untraceable.

This tradition is endorsed eight times by Ibn Ḥanbal, on the authority of Abū Hurairah.

The same tradition is transmitted by twenty-one Companions.

10 out of 21 belong to Madīnah.

6 belong to Baṣrah.

2 belong to Kūfah.

1 to Khurāsān.

1 to Ḥimṣ.

1 to the tribe of 'Abd al-Qais.

Their students reach fifty-eight in number.

11 out of 58 belong to Madīnah.

13 belong to Baṣrah.

13 belong to Kūfah.

1 to Syria.

3 to Makkah.

1 to Egypt.

2 to Marw.

1 to Bahrān.

1 to Yemen.

12 are unknown to me.

If we go one step further towards these scholars' students, we find the number increases to seventy-four.

12 out of 74 belong to Madīnah.

18 belong to Baṣrah.

1 to Yamāmah.

5 to Makkah.

- 1 to Tūstar.
- 1 to Syria.
- 15 to Kūfah.
- 1 to Wāsiṭ.
- 2 to Yemen.
- 1 to Ṭā'if.
- 1 to Egypt.
- 1 to Jazīrah.
- 1 to Khurāsān.
- 14 are unknown to me.

One of them, Shu'bah, has transmitted from seven authorities; Zuhair, Salamah, Ḥammād, and Qatādah, each from three authorities, and Qurrah from two authorities.

Shi'ite, Zaidī and Ibādī sources quote this tradition through their own channels.

The common feature of a good many traditions in the early part of the second century A.H. is the great number of transmitters who belong to different provinces and countries. We have for example seen in tradition No. 27 some seventy-four students belonging to a dozen different places. It was hardly possible for all these persons to consult each other so as to give a similar form and sense in transmitting a particular tradition. So if a particular tradition is transmitted by so many persons with a similar form and sense, then its genuineness cannot be questioned, as the trustworthiness of the individuals has been vouched for by their contemporaries. It is a general practice that if a man's honesty is proved by his dealing with the people, then his words are accepted as a true statement unless it is proved otherwise by facts. For the past generation with whom personal contact is impossible one needs to rely to a large extent on the testimony of contemporary sources. The standard fixed by the traditionists from the very early days was that if someone tells a lie in his personal life, though he was honest in the transmitting of traditions, his traditions would not be accepted¹. They criticised their fathers, brothers, friends and close relatives². And, perhaps, it was the highest possible

1. Rāzī, i, i, 289-90. See also Suyūṭī, Tadrīb, 220-21.
2. Mizān, iv, 364.

standard that could be set for documentation of any source. Therefore, there is no good reason to reject the testimony of the contemporaries.

Hadīth literature offers an opportunity for further satisfactions. The other method to test their trustworthiness and honesty is by cross-references to the statements of scholars. The method was employed by traditionists in early days. Ayyūb (d. 131) says that if one wants to know the mistake of his teacher he ought to frequent other teachers as well¹. Ibn al-Mubārak (d. 181) says that to reach an authentic statement one needs to compare the words of scholars with each other². When Ibn 'Uyaynah delivered his lectures on traditions, he was questioned by students whenever he differed from his colleague Mālik³. Ḥammād b. Salamah committed some mistakes. His pupils, transmitting his books, committed some more. Yaḥyā b. Ma'īn collected the records from eighteen students of Ḥammād to discriminate between the errors of Ḥammād and his students⁴.

The same method can be utilized to compare the statements of later authorities; then going one step back to compare their teachers' statements till we reach the Prophet. If in a number of cases this method works and gives satisfactory results, it will provide confidence as a whole in the traditionists' literature. The present research provides sufficient grounds to accept this literature as a whole. The study also indicates the early beginning of the isnād system in Hadīth. Abū Hurairah died in 58 or thereabouts, but there are other Companions who died earlier than Abū Hurairah and their traditions are also transmitted through an isnād. As it is found in many cases that 5, 6, 10, or more students belonging to different countries transmit a tradition from one Companion and they provide an isnād going back to the Prophet, their statement should be accepted as authentic. We even find that some early companions, e.g., 'Umar and 'Uthmān, etc., transmitting traditions gave as their immediate authorities not the Prophet but some other Companions. Had the system of isnād not existed, it would not have been possible for them to transmit this way.

Refutation of Schacht's theory of the spread of Isnāds.

Professor Schacht has formulated a theory to detect the date for the forgery of Hadīth. Professor Robson has commented on the method and conclusions of Schacht, paying him very high tribute for his achievements. It reads,... "This is a very valuable contribution to the study of the development of Tradition, for it not merely suggests a date when certain traditions became attributed to the Prophet, but gives a certain value to the chain of authorities, suggesting that the latter part of the chain is genuine, whereas the earlier part which goes back to the Prophet is fictitious"¹.

Schacht describes his method as follows:

"These results regarding the growth of isnāds enable us to envisage the case in which a tradition was put into circulation by a traditionist whom we may call N.N., or by a person who used his name, at a certain time. The tradition would normally be taken over by one or several transmitters, and the lower, real part of the isnād would branch out into several strands... But N.N. would remain the (lowest) common link in the several strands of isnāds (or at least in most of them, allowing for his being passed by and eliminated in additional strands of isnāds (or at least in most of them, allowing for his being passed by and eliminated in additional strands of isnāds which might have been introduced later)...

"The case discussed in the preceding paragraph is not hypothetical but of common occurrence. It was observed, though of course not recognized in its implications, by the Muhammadan scholars themselves...

"A typical example of the phenomenon of the common transmitter occurs in Ikh. 294, where a tradition has the following isnāds:

1. Robson, Muslim Tradition... Manchester Memoirs, vol. xciii, (1951-2), No. 7, pp. 98-9.

Prophet	Prophet	Prophet
Jābir	Jābir	Jābir
a man of Banū Salama	Muṭṭalib	Muṭṭalib
	'Amr b. Abī 'Amr the freedman of Muṭṭalib
'Abd al-'azīz b. Muḥammad	Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad	Sulaimān b. Bilāl
		Anonymous
Shāfi	Shāfi	Shāfi

'Amr b. Abī 'Amr is the common link in these isnāds. He would hardly have hesitated between his own patron and an anonymous transmitter for his immediate authority"¹.

In support of his statement, Schacht produces only one example, which gives a false impression. At first, his diagram, as we have seen, gives an impression that there were three authorities from whom 'Amr had transmitted this tradition. As a matter of fact, the name of his teacher, Muṭṭalib, occurs twice in the diagram. Hence, it should be drawn as follows:

1. Origins 171-2. For the cases of anonymity in isnād see, supra, p. 222.

Besides this, it seems that Professor Schacht either over-looked the text of Ikh. 294 or did not understand it. Shāfi‘ī, comparing between three students of ‘Amr, makes it clear that ‘Abd al-‘Azīz was wrong in naming the authority of ‘Amr as a man of Banū Salama, that Ibrāhīm was a stronger transmitter than ‘Abd al-‘Azīz and his statement is attested to by Sulaimān as well. Hence, it appears, that there is only one channel through which ‘Amr has received his information. Accordingly, the diagram would appear as follows:

Thus all the conclusions of Schacht and that of Robson are irrelevant and baseless.

Furthermore, even if we accept Schacht's explanation that ‘Amr claimed that he received the information through different lines, we have to remember that this is a single case. It does not appear that Professor Schacht has made any thorough investigation of isnāds of a considerable part of legal traditions necessary to put forward a theory of this nature, let alone his investigation of all of them or most of them. A theory of such common application is unacceptable on such a meager evidence. It seems that he has two kinds of measurements for research. To formulate a theory, he uses the term ‘common occurrence’¹, basing his research on a few examples that suit his theory; and if there are cases which cover 99% of the subject that refute his theory, then he uses the word ‘occasionally’² to minimize their effect. This dual standard of argument shows his prejudice and bias and consequently jeopardizes the conclusions of his whole research.

Moreover, even if it happens that there are some cases where a tradition is transmitted through a variety of lines of authorities and has a common transmitter at a certain age, the conclusion of Schacht would still be invalid. Because the edited work of Suhail makes it clear that dozens of scholars, belonging to different countries, transmitted a single tradition from one source while a few of them such as al-Zuhri, Shu‘bah etc., transmitted it from more than one. If we find a scholar like al-Zuhri who is the only narrator from one source or more, in some cases, his trustworthiness has been established, there is no reason to suspect someone, even to charge him with forgery, on the basis that he is the sole authority who has transmitted a tradition and no other source for the same tradition is traceable, as is done by Schacht, is nonsense. For this kind of charge one should have some solid positive ground. It is doubtful if we apply the same standard to any other literature of the world, we would be able to prove its authenticity. However, traditionists themselves were aware of this kind of problem and its implications and they have given the proper place to everything according to its merits. Here is an example. Dhahabī says³:

1. Origin. 172

2. Origin. 28.

3. Mizān, iii, 140-1.

كل واحد عنده ما ليس عند الآخر من العلم ، وما الغرض ، فان هذا مقرر على ما ينبغي في علم الحديث . وان تفرد الثقة المتقن يعد صحيحاً غريباً ، وان تفرد الصدوق ومن دونه يعد منكرًا . وان اكثار الراوى من الأحاديث التي لا يوافق عليها لفظاً او اسناداً بصيره متروك الحديث »

There remains one more point. A scholar had material on a single topic by different authorities and had collected many traditions to this effect. Later scholars have utilized all these materials in such a way that he appears to be the common link in all isnāds. This does not provide a proof of fabrication of material by this certain person. It means, most probably, that the later authorities were quoting from his work referring to the author instead of the work, as was the fashion of the time.

GENERAL CONCLUSION ABOUT THE THE GROWTH OF ISNĀDS WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO SUHAIL'S WORK.

If we analyse the traditions regarding the growth of their isnāds with special reference to Suhail's work, we may put them in three categories:

1. Traditions transmitted by only one Companion, who has only one student, who in turn has only one transmitter from him. The following traditions of Suhail come under this category:— 11; 28; 35; 43; 44 = 5 traditions.

2. Traditions transmitted by a certain Companion, who has only one student but the traditions have been attested to by other Companions. The following traditions of Suhail come under this category: 1; 2; 13; 14; 29; 31; 34; 37; 38; 39; 42 = 11 traditions.

3. Traditions transmitted by a certain Companion having more than one student; meanwhile the traditions in the same sense are transmitted by other Companions with a fair number of students. The following traditions of Suhail come under this category: 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10; 12; 15; 16; 17; 18; 19; 20; 21; 22; 23; 24; 25; 26; 27; 30; 32; 33; 36; 40; 41; 45; 46; 47; 48 = 32 traditions.

4. Besides these there may be traditions transmitted from more than one Companion, but in the later period a single transmitter is the only transmitter from all the higher authorities. This is rare and there is no example of this sort in Suhail's work.

Schacht and the authenticity of Isnāds.

"... The isnāds constitute the most arbitrary part of the traditions... [And] it is common knowledge that the isnād started from rudimentary beginnings and reached perfection in the classical collections of traditions in the second half of the third century A.H.... The isnāds were often put together very carelessly. Any typical representative of the group whose doctrine was to be projected back on to an ancient authority, could be chosen at random and put into the isnād... The following are further examples of the general uncertainty and arbitrary character of isnāds"¹.

The present study shows quite different phenomena of the isnāds. Now, it is beyond doubt that the system of isnād began from the time of the Prophet. The scholars differed from one to another in utilizing the system. At the end of the century it had reached almost its peak. The numbers of transmitters of one tradition and their different localities make it difficult to imagine the theory of "projecting back". It was not that perfection extended into the time of classical collection, as maintained by Schacht², but in the words of Fouad Sezgin, who studied Bukhārī in this context, "He [Bukhārī] can, in fact, be regarded as the first person to seriously shake the authority of the isnād"³.

In the thousands of traditions transmitted by Mālik or other scholars, Professor Schacht picks out the faulty cases to formulate a theory. This is the main feature of his research. Even the references provided by him tend to refute his theory. For example⁴, where he points out Mālik's mistakes, referring to Zurqānī, he does not quote the complete paragraph. For Zurqānī has also pointed out that even Mālik's student, Shāfi'ī, checked his fault⁵. The scholars, comparing Mālik's Hadīth with several of his colleagues, found him faulty. And as seven out of eight scholars were almost agreed and unanimous in their actual Hadīth against Mālik, thus the mistake was checked⁶. If it were a common practice to attach isnāds to forged Aḥādīth it would have been impossible to check and remove the discrepancy. The fact that checking was and could be done shows that a fictitious isnād was very rare and almost impossible to remain undetected. It cannot be denied that every scholar commits mistakes in copying at one time or another¹, but these cases cannot be accepted as the only relevant material for research.

4. He says, "The isnāds were often put together carelessly" (Origin. 163) and says in the footnote see: significant examples above, p. 53f and below, p. 263. This example is given by Schacht in Origin, p. 263.

Argument concerning Schacht's examples of the arbitrary character of Isnāds.

1. He refers to 'Umar's prostration after the recitation of a certain chapter from the Qur'ān which is related by 'Urwah, and which has a "Munqati' isnād". He says, "Bukhārī has a different, uninterrupted isnād. But old copies of the Muwatta' have 'and we did it together with him', which is impossible in the mouth of 'Urwa. This, of course is the original text of the Muwatta'... This shows that the formulation of the text of the tradition came first, the isnād was added arbitrarily and improved and extended backwards later"². It does not appear on what authority Professor Schacht thinks that this "of course" is the original text of the Muwatta'. The most famous commentator on the Muwatta', Ibn 'Abd al-Barr (d. 463 A.H.) has not seen anything of this sort. Here is the text:

ان عمر بن الخطاب قرأ سجدة وهو على المنبر فزل فسجد وسجد الناس معه . هكذا الرواية الصحيحة وهي التي عند ابى عمرو ، ويقع في نسخ وسجدنا معه ... ثم قرأها يوم الجمعة الاخرى فتهياً للناس للسجود ، فقال على رسلكم ... فلم يسجدوا ومنعهم ان يسجدوا.

Zurqānī says that this is the correct version and in some copies 'wa sajadnā ma'ahā', but there is no reference to the 'old copies'. After all every Arabist would reach the conclusion in this case that this was due to the scribe's mistake who dropped a single letter sīn س from وسجد الناس معه which was sufficient to make all these versions. Moreover, if it had been the original text as it is assumed

1. Schacht himself has committed mistakes in his book, for example when he mentions that Ibrāhīm confirms certain things by pointing out the absence of any information on the matter from the Prophet (Origin. 60), and refers to A.Y. 349-52. But A.Y. 349-50 have explicit statements contrary to this claim.

2. Origin. 164.

by Schacht, and 'Urwah had used the first person personal pronoun plural number, most likely he would have changed the structure of the whole of the next sentence and it would have been قتهياً للسجود .. فلم نسجد .. ومنعنا ان نسجد .

Furthermore, as Mālik transmits this tradition on the authority of Hishām, if it were a case of forgery, they would not have been so foolish as to make such a blunder because both of them were clever scholars. Therefore to cast doubt on the isnād of Bukhārī, basing it on a discrepancy of the text which occurred in later centuries is wrong and unacceptable.

2. Another Example.

"A significant example of the arbitrary creation of Isnāds occurs in TR. II 6 (a) and (b). Here we have first three versions of an Iraqi tradition that 'Alī said, or gave orders to say prayers over the tomb of Sahl b. Ḥunaif. [He is mistaken here¹; there is only one version to this effect.]. The prayer over the tomb was an Iraqi invention, but did not become prevalent in Iraq... Nor did it become prevalent in Medina, although a tradition from the Prophet in its favour found currency there. The isnād of this tradition uses the son of Sahl... It is Mursal; the isnād was later completed by inserting Sahl himself and by creating new isnāds through other companions"². If the prayer over the tomb was an Iraqi invention, as assumed by Schacht, and later on the traditions were fabricated, both in Medinite and Iraqi circles, going back to the Prophet, then why did it not become prevalent either in Iraq or in Medinah? How did the Iraqians convince their opponents, Medinites, to invent a tradition in their favour? What impossibility is there if the Prophet had prayed on the tomb once or twice in his life, and this was taken by 'Alī?

Schacht did not quote Zurqānī completely. Zurqānī says that all the transmitters of the Muwatta' agree unanimously that it is a Mursal tradition but Mūsā b. Muḥammad transmitted from Mālik with full isnād. Mūsā is Matrūk — abandoned —. Sufyān b. Ḥusain, transmitting this tradition through al-Zuhri, provides a complete isnād, and the scholars unanimously held that Sufyān is a weak narrator from al-Zuhri. Thus the correct conclusion is that this is a Mursal tradition¹. It means that the scholars have checked this mistake and did not accept it, yet Zurqānī adds that the tradition itself is authentic and transmitted by many Companions with authentic isnāds. It proves that they judge everything on its own merits; even if the text is correct, it is not accepted with a false isnād.

1. The wordings in the brackets are the notes of the present writer.

2. Origin. 165.

Example 3.

Schacht notices that the editor of Āthār Abū Yūsuf "has collected in the commentary the parallels in the classical and other collections; a comparison shows the extent of the progressive completion, improvement, and backward growth is isnāds"².

A few examples already collected from Abū Yūsuf and Shāfi'ī's writings show the method of handling their documents. They were more content with the subject matter referred to it in the easiest way³, but it was the duty of traditionist as specialists in the subject to guard it by every means. So, it is fundamentally unscientific to carry a research in isnād through law books as it has been clear from Abū Yūsuf's own writings⁴.

Example 4.

Professor Schacht gives another example, where he thinks a Mursal tradition was awarded a full isnād, and quotes, "But Ṭaḥāwī remarks that the most reliable of Mālik's companions, including Qa'nabī and Ibn Wahb, relate it with an imperfect isnād, that is, mursal"⁵. The learned Professor misunderstood here, the text of Ṭaḥāwī. Ṭaḥāwī speaks only of the tradition transmitted by the students of Mālik. Some students of Mālik transmitted it with full isnāds, but his famous students transmitted it as *Munqaṭi*⁶. He does not speak about the traditions coming through different channels other than Mālik.

Example 5.

"The first tradition from the Prophet in favour of the Medinese doctrine, and the only one known to Mālik, in Mursal... In Mecca, the tradition was provided with an uninterrupted isnād of Meccan authorities... This was the only additional version which Shāfi'ī knew when he wrote TR. III, 15 [in the same paragraph the document of Sa'd (d. 15) is mentioned, see Umm vii 112, and Schacht has overlooked it]. When he wrote Ikh. 346, he knew a further version with a Medinese isnād, relating it from the Prophet on the authority of two Companions. In Umm vi, 273 ff. he quotes the following additional versions"¹. Professor Schacht, afterwards, gives those other versions². Two of them are transmitted through Darāwardī, and so Schacht thinks that either Darāwardī or someone who utilized his name was responsible for this.

We cannot say that Mālik knew about this case. Even without discussing it in detail, the case of Shāfi'ī is much clear. He gives nine versions in Umm, vol. vi, 273, in vol. vii (Tr. III, 15). Therefore it is incorrect to say that when he wrote Tr. III, 15, he knew only one additional version, because Tr. III, 15, has two versions and because it makes a part of vol. vii, while Shāfi'ī has given in vol. vi, nine versions. Naturally he would have composed vol. vi, earlier than vol. vii. Furthermore, Shāfi'ī says that he has lost some of his books and aimed at conciseness, so has given only what would be sufficient, without exhausting all that can be known on the subject³.

To conclude the discussion on the 'arbitrary character' of isnāds, only one more case is examined.

Example 6.

Schacht says, "We sometimes find that isnāds which consist of a rigid and formal chain of representatives of a school of law and project its doctrine back to some ancient authority, are duplicated by others which go back to the same authority by another way. This was intended as a confirmation of the doctrine of the school by seemingly independent evidence. A Medinese example is:

3. Shāfi'ī, Risālah, 431. This is well-known to Prof. Schacht, see Origin.

I.U.—A.Q.—his father—the opinion of ‘Uthmān, Zaid and Marwān (Tr. III, 89(a)).

The interruption in the isnād above Qāsim was remedied, and A.Q. eliminated, in: Mālik—Yahyā—Qāsim—Furāfiṣa—‘Uthmān (Muw. ii, 151 [see 152]); finally there appeared: Mālik—Ibn Abū Bakr—b. ‘Amir—‘Uthmān, with a composite anecdote (Muw. ii, 192)¹.

Professor Schacht reverses the case. He says that the interruption of the above-mentioned isnād was remedied and A.Q. was eliminated in Mālik. But Mursal isnād occurs in Shāfi‘ī’s book al-Umm, VII, 224. Mālik had compiled his work some forty or fifty years earlier than Shāfi‘ī’s work. If we accept Schacht’s statement, then we would have to wait till after the death of Shāfi‘ī for the compilation of Muwatta’!!! which actually existed some fifty years before Shāfi‘ī’s work. So, according to Professor Schacht, the mistake was remedied before it was ever committed. The whole problem which is described in these two Hadīth is that they report the act of the Caliph ‘Uthmān, that he covered his face in the time of pilgrimage to save himself from the scorching heat. What impossibility do we face, if two men have seen him in the pilgrimage doing this!!!

Difficulties in the ‘Projecting Back’ theory of Schacht.

All scholars, even of one city, differ in their fame. Every student wants to attach himself to the most respectable authority of his time. In the second century a good deal of literature was available about الجرح والتعديل. The mastery of many scholars had been accepted, while others had been denounced. Why did not all the students choose the most respected personality and put their traditions in his mouth and link them with the most reliable isnād? Why did they choose weak and Matrūk personalities so often?

The other difficult problem we face is the existence of quite a number of traditions common in form and sense in the traditionist literature of different Muslim sects, e.g., Sunnī, Zaidī, Shi‘ite and Khārijite, etc.², who had split off only thirty years after the death of the Prophet. Had all the legal traditions been fabricated in the second and third century A.H., there could not be a single tradition common to sources of these different sects. Schacht’s explanation is historically unacceptable. He says, “for a considerable period, and during the second and the third centuries A.H. in particular, the ancient sects remained in a sufficiently close contact with the Sunnī community, for them to adopt Muhammadan law as it was being developed in the orthodox schools of Law, introducing only such superficial modifications as required by their own political and dogmatic tenets”¹. How can one accept this theory while the pages of history are full of war? The continually fought each other with the sword, condemning their opponents as out of Islam, rejecting their beliefs and ideas and abusing each other from the pulpits of mosques. All these circumstances make it hard even to suggest a close relation with the Sunnī community only for borrowing legal ideas!

His claim that the isnāds were duplicated by others which go back to the same authority by another way providing independent evidence to confirm the doctrine, is absurd. As it has been shown earlier, the transmitters of a single tradition, in so many cases, belong to a dozen different countries and thus their meetings and agreement on this sort of fabrication was almost impossible.

Professor Robson, commenting on Schacht’s theory of the improvement of isnād, points out that, “Traditionist themselves have drawn attention to certain men who have a reputation for taking traditions which go back only to Followers or Companions and giving them a complete isnād back to the Prophet... But we have seen that there is reason to believe that the same thing has been done with traditions which are accepted everywhere. Why were some men blamed for acting dishonestly while others were allowed to do the same thing without any attention being drawn to the fact? I feel sure that it was not because they were cleverer and more able to conceal their handiwork. It was rather that they were working within schools which had certain principles to establish”².

Professor Robson may be sure, but he does not provide any basis for his hypothesis. If he had taken a few names who are accused of this kind of practice, had examined their traditions which are supposed to have been improved in this way and had found some common fact of scholastic dispute, then it could be a tenable theory. Otherwise there can be no value in maintaining a theory without any base. There is a very famous tradition كلكم راع وكلكم معسر with full isnāds and transmitted by many Companions. Ibn 'Uyaynah used to transmit this tradition Mursal. All of his students transmitted it Mursal, while Ibrāhīm b. Bashshār transmitted it with full isnād and on this basis the scholars "weakened" him, saying: ليس بالمتقن¹. The tradition in question does not have any political or religious basis but an ethical one. What scholastic feeling can one find in it?

There is another tradition concerning zakāt: that it is not due till the year ends. It is transmitted as an athar of Ibn 'Umar² and is accepted among all lawyers. Someone has transmitted it as going back to the Prophet, which was rejected, and it is accepted as the words of Ibn 'Umar and as a basis for Zakāt taxation. The scholars charged someone of this practice after making comparisons between the notes of different students of one teacher and then tracing them back and comparing their materials. Sometimes they collected fifteen and twenty versions of one work to compare for mistakes and discrepancies³.

Schacht and the Isnād of Mālik and Nāfi'.

Professor Schacht has cast suspicion on the isnād of Mālik — Nāfi' — Ibn 'Umar and has challenged its authenticity on two grounds:

On the age of Mālik.

Relation of Nāfi' with Ibn 'Umar as he was the client. In his own words: "But as Nāfi' died in A.H. 117 or thereabouts, and Mālik in A.H. 179, their association can have taken place, even at the most generous estimate, only when Mālik was little more than a boy. It may even be questioned whether Mālik, whom Shāfi'i charged elsewhere with concealing imperfections in his isnāds, did not take over in written form traditions alleged to come from Nāfi'"¹. He says in the footnote that, "Nothing authentic is known of Mālik's date of birth"².

Professor Schacht treats the case in reverse. Instead of giving the birth date of Mālik to show how old he was when Nāfi' died, he gives the death date of Mālik claiming nothing authentic is known of his date of birth and gives the impression, even in writing, that he was little more than a boy. Had he consulted any bibliographical work he would have found that most of the scholars, even those who were born a little earlier than Mālik, state that he was born in 93 A.H.; a few put it in the early months of 94 A.H., a few in 90 A.H. and a few in 97³. But there is no one who maintains any date later than this. So, Mālik was at least twenty years old, if not twenty-four or twenty-seven, when Nāfi' died. He transmitted in the Muwatta' from Nāfi' only eighty traditions of the Prophet, which covers about fifteen pages⁴ in the printed text of Ibn 'Abd al-Barr. Other āthar transmitted by Mālik on the authority of Nāfi', are not taken into account; if we give an equal number to those from the Prophet, then it would be some thirty pages. The teacher Nāfi' and the student Mālik both lived in one city till Mālik was twenty-four years old, which makes it difficult to say that he might not have learned these thirty pages from his teacher. Schacht's omission of Mālik's birth date in this argument can lead only to erroneous conclusions.

The other point raised by Schacht is that Nāfi' was a client of Ibn 'Umar. But if a man is being accepted amongst his contemporaries and among the later authorities as most trustworthy, then why should he be dishonest? If a statement of a father about his son or vice versa, or a wife about her husband or a friend about a friend or a colleague about a colleague is always unacceptable, then on what sources could a biography possibly be written? Nāfi' was not the only scholar who transmitted from Ibn 'Umar, but there were students in great numbers, and the scholars always tried to cross-check each other's statements¹. If there had been falsification of the sort suggested by Schacht, it would have been impossible that all the other scholars should have kept quiet about him. To claim that hundreds of thousands of scholars spent their lives making forgeries in collusion and produced this vast literature with all biographical details is to show an utter disregard for human nature.

Professor Robson has said in this context, "Was the family isnād invented to supply apparent evidence for spurious traditions, or did genuine family isnāds exist which later served as models? It seems better to recognise that they are a genuine feature of the documentation, but to realize that people often copied this type of isnād to support spurious traditions. Therefore, while holding that family isnāds do genuinely exist, one will not take them all at face value"².

It is always the case that the genuine thing exists first, and forgery follows. It is quite right that all the family isnāds should not be taken as genuine ones. The traditionists, as is obvious from their biographical works, were aware of this fact, and there is no lack of references where they denounce this sort of isnād; e.g. (1) Ma'mar b. Muḥammad and his transmission from his father³, (2) 'Isā b. 'Abd Allāh from his father, (3) Kathīr b. Abd Allāh from his father, (4) Mūsā b. Maṭīr from his father, (5) Yaḥyā b. 'Abd Allāh from his father, etc.

FINAL CONCLUSION.

Summing up the discussion one reaches the following conclusions.

The isnād system began in the lifetime of the Prophet and was used by Companions in transmitting the traditions of the Prophet.

Political upheavals in the fourth decade gave birth to the forgery of traditions in the political sphere, to credit or discredit certain parties. So, scholars became more cautious and began to scrutinize, criticize and search for the sources of information. The use of isnād, therefore, became more and more important.

Orientalists have not chosen the right field for the study of isnād. The writings of Abū Yūsuf and Shāfi'ī clearly show the inadequacy of law books for the study of isnāds.

The nature of Sīrah work is far from being merely documentary; for this reason the study of isnād or Hadīth ought to be carried out in its own literature.

The examples supplied by Schacht tend to refute his own theory. The phenomena of isnād, the numbers of transmitters belonging to scores of provinces, thoroughly invalidate the theory of "projecting back", "artificial creations" and similar statements.

There does not seem to be "any sort of improvement in isnād". Traditionists themselves have checked for this sort of fault. To maintain that they were criticized when they served opponents' scholastic interests is only an assumption without historical evidence. The documents positively refute this theory.

There is no reason whatsoever to discredit the isnād of Mālik—Nafi'—Ibn 'Umar.

All the "family isnāds" are not genuine, and all the "family isnāds" are not spurious.

According to traditionists, a correct document was wrong and unacceptable unless it came through a proper channel.

There is no reason to reject the isnād system. It is proved that it has every element which can command the acceptance of the system as a whole.

Traditionists have taken the utmost care to check errors and discrepancies with sincerity.

The literature still provides sufficient ground for research, and all reasonable methods may be applied to test it.

CHAPTER VII

AHĀDĪTH

THE AUTHENTICITY OF ḤADĪTH.

It has already been shown that the great number of transmitters of traditions, belonging to different provinces and countries, and the constant checking of discrepancies at every stage, leaves very little room for forgery in isnād.

The second part of this work contains the text of three early manuscripts which were the primary sources of Mālik for his Muwatta'. The primary sources of Bukhārī viz. 'Abd al-Razzāq, Humaidī and others are in our hands. Even the earliest sources of Shuyūkh, viz. Al-Thaurī, Ibn Juraij and al-A'mash are at our disposal. Cross-checking of traditions in these sources in various stages gives us sufficient basis to accept them as genuine, especially when we bear in mind the literary activity of scholars of the pre-Classical period, which has been described in the third chapter of this work. It gives us more confidence when we find that the students used to check their teachers in the class-room, referring to the teachers' colleagues and their documents.

Schacht and the authenticity of Ḥadīth.

The result of Professor Schacht's study contradicts the conclusion of the present study. In Chapter VI, it has been explained that the study of Ḥadīth and isnād in legal or Sīrah books would lead to wrong conclusions. Schacht has outlined the sketches of the early legal activities of the first and second centuries of the Hijrah, and has provided some examples of "forged traditions". In this chapter we shall at first examine the picture drawn by him of early legal activities, and then we shall look into his illustrations.

An Outline of Early Legal Activities of the First and Second Centuries A.H. as given by Professor Schacht.

The Prophet, in Madīnah, "Became a 'Prophet-Lawgiver' ... his authority was not legal but, for the believers, religious and, for the lukewarm, political"¹.

The Caliphs (632-62) "were the political leaders of the Islamic Community... but they do not seem to have acted as its supreme arbitrators... the caliphs acted to a great extent as the lawgivers of the community"².

"The first caliphs did not appoint *Kāḍīs*³... The Umayyads... took the important step of appointing Islamic judges or Kāḍīs"⁴. "...From the turn of the century onwards (c. A.D. 715-20) appointments [of Kāḍīs] as a rule went to 'specialist'... the specialists from whom the Kāḍīs came increasingly to be recruited were found among those pious persons whose interest in religion caused them to elaborate, and individual reasoning, an Islamic way of life"⁵. "As the groups of pious specialists grew in numbers and in cohesion, they developed, in the first few decades of the second century of Islam, into the ancient schools of Law"⁶.

"The ancient schools of law shared... the essentials of legal theory... The central idea of this theory was that of the 'living tradition of the school' as represented by the constant doctrine of its authoritative representatives... It presents itself under two aspects. retrospective and synchronous. Retrospectively it appears as Sunna or "Practice" (ʿAmal)⁷...

"Nevertheless, the idea of continuity inherent in the concept of sunna, the idealized practice, together with the need to create

7. Ibid., 29-30. It is wrong to say, as described by Schacht, Origin. 58, that the old concept of Sunnah was the customary of generally agreed practice and the place was filled in later systems by the Sunnah of the Prophet. The word Sunnah of the Prophet is used by the Prophet, Abū Bakr, 'Umar, 'Uthmān and 'Alī See Wensinck, Concordance, vol. ii, 555-8, Yaqūbī, History, ii, 104. For the usage of the word in the first century Mu'tazilah writings see al-Murtaḍā, Tabaqāt al-Mu'azilīh, 19. See also Tabarī, Annales, i, 3166, 3299, 3044.

some kind of theoretical justification for what so far had been an instinctive reliance on the opinions of the majority, led, from the first decades of the second century onwards, to the living tradition being projected backwards and to its being ascribed to some of the great figures of the past. The Kufians were the first in attributing the doctrine of their school to Ibrāhīm al-Nakh'ī... The Medinese followed suit...'¹.

"The process of going backwards for a theoretical foundation of Islamic religious law... did not stop at these relatively late authorities..., [but was taken back to and] directly connected with the very beginnings of Islam in Kūfa, beginnings associated with Ibn Mas'ūd² ...".

"The movement of the Traditionists... in the second century of the Hijrah, was the natural outcome and continuation of a movement of religiously and ethically inspired opposition to the ancient schools of law"³. "The main thesis of the Traditionists... was the formal "traditions"... deriving from the Prophet superseded the living tradition of the school... The Traditionists produced detailed statements or 'traditions' which claimed to be the reports of ear-or eye-witnesses on the words or acts of the Prophet, handed down orally by an uninterrupted chain (Isnād) of trustworthy persons. Hardly any of these traditions, as far as matters of religious law are concerned, can be considered authentic"⁴. All "the ancient schools of law, ... offered strong resistance to the disturbing element represented by the traditions which claimed to go back to the Prophet"⁵. And, "Traditions from the Prophet had to overcome a strong opposition on the part of the ancient schools of law..."⁶.

5. Ibid., 35.

6. Origin. 57. This conception is entirely wrong. The over-ruling authority of the Sunnah of the Prophet and as the basic source of law is a rule accepted by all from the earliest days of Islam. See for details, Shāfi'ī, Umm, vii, 250; Sibā'ī, Sunnah, 160; al-Baṣrī al-Mu'tazilī, al-Mu'tamad, 377-387; Kayyāt, Intisār, 89, 98; 135-6, 137; Ibn 'Umar's saying, Ḥanbal, ii, 95; for the sayings of Abū Ḥanīfah see Ibn 'Abd al-Barr, Intiqā', 145; and for Auzā'ī, Abū Yūsuf, 37, 46.

The main reason for this wrong conclusion of Schacht is his unscientific method of research. He utilizes the polemic writings of scholars, mainly Shāfi'ī's accusation of his opponent, to define the legal doctrines of Shāfi'ī's

"It is safe to assume that Muhammadan law hardly existed in the time of the historical Sha'bī", (d. 110)¹. "Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī of Kūfa (d. 95 or 96 A.H...) did no more than give opinions on questions of ritual, and perhaps on kindred problems of directly religious importance... but not on technical points of law"².

Schacht's Conception of the Nature of Law in Islām.

It seems as if Schacht is fundamentally wrong in the conception of the function of the Prophet Muḥammad as a legislator. To say that the Prophet in Madīnah became a "prophet-lawgiver" and simultaneously claim that his authority was not legal is a statement with misleading implications. He ignored the Qur'ān totally in this context. Had he gone through it, he would have found the clear divine legislative authority of the Prophet³. Furthermore, the earliest written document of "the Constitution of Medina" gives him the supreme authority in all their disputes and his decision was the final one⁴. He has the highest judicial authority according to the *Qur'ān*⁵. Law in Islam has a divine origin⁶. Kharijites parted from 'Alī, on his setting up of a human tribunal as they believed it was against the divine word, loudly protesting that "judgment belongs to God alone"⁷. All the community was and is bound to judge according to the law revealed by God, otherwise they would no longer remain Muslims⁸. Therefore it was the prime duty of the Prophet as well as the Caliphs to promulgate the law and administer justice according to it. As law in Islam has a divine origin, so is the administration of justice a Divine ordinance and a practice of the Prophet which ought to be followed¹. There are references to the Companions who were sent as Qādīs by the Prophet². Meanwhile, the governors of the Prophet were ordered to administer justice and were given clear instructions to dispense justice impartially³. A very good list of the early Qādīs appointed by 'Umar and the other early Caliphs could be provided, even now, from the available sources⁴. Therefore Schacht's claim that the Prophet's authority was not legal and that the first Caliphs did not appoint Qādīs and that the conception of Islamic way of life is the production of pious persons' individual reasoning, is absurd and contrary to facts. The Caliph 'Uthmān even built a separate building for the Court of Justice with the name *Dār al-Qadā'*⁵. Professor Schacht does not give us any reason as to what compelled early scholars of the first century to confine themselves to ritual decisions. Did no dispute occur among them for 100 years? Did they not buy or sell⁶, which could cause some misunderstanding, so that they had to go to the court?

Schacht's 'ancient schools of law' and the birth of an opposition party in their chronological setting.

Abū Hanīfah died in 150. His clear statement about the overruling authority of the Sunnah of the Prophet goes back to about 140 A.H.⁷. We have been told that in the life of Sha'bī, d. 110, Islamic law did not exist. Between 110 and 140, there remain only thirty years for the following activities:

Birth of ancient schools of law.

Growth of the schools and ideas of consensus.

1. The letter of Caliph 'Umar to Abū Mūsā, J.R.A.S., 1910, as quoted by Hamīdullāh, Administration of Justice in Early Islam. Islamic Culture, 1937, p. 169.

Projecting back of ideas, for example by Iraqi, to the higher authority, Al-Nakha'ī.

Further projecting to an older authority than Al-Nakha'ī such as Masrūq.

Further projecting to the oldest authority such as Ibn Mas'ūd.

Projecting back to the Prophet as a last resort.

Birth of opposition group, (traditionists).

Their fabrications of Hadith with full details of the life and decisions of the Prophet as well as of the Companions.

The opposition's fight with the ancient schools, and the loss of ground by ancient schools and the establishment of the overruling authority of the Sunnah.

Meanwhile one must bear in mind that an opposition party comes into existence after a considerable time from the birth of the opposed party, especially if this is quite a new thing. A mere thirty years for all these activities is inconceivable, and thus Schacht falls back on the theory of living traditions.

Now, it is obvious that the legal activities of the first centuries and the birth of the opposition party is unacceptable in their chronological setting as described by Schacht.

Schacht and "The Growth of Legal Traditions in the Literary Period".

According to Schacht "...The best way of proving that a tradition did not exist at a certain time is to show that it was not used as a legal argument in a discussion which would have made reference to it imperative, if it had existed"¹.

There are many problems which need to be solved before accepting this theory.

1. Contradictory Statement.

First of all one has to observe the contradictory statements of Schacht. He says that two generations before Shāfi'ī, reference to the tradition of the Prophet was the exception². Furthermore,

1. Origin. 140.

2. Ibid., 3.

according to him, all these ancient schools of law offered strong resistance to the traditions of the Prophet¹. In view of the above statements what would have made reference to traditions of the Prophet imperative even if they existed. Either his two earlier statements are wrong, or his whole chapter is irrelevant for the purpose.

2. The theory against human nature.

The other fundamental objection to this theory is that this is against human nature. Who can claim that he has all the knowledge of the subject and nothing is missing. Therefore, if a tradition is not quoted by a certain scholar, how does it prove that it did not exist².

3. Chaos in Terminology.

Moverover Schacht gives the title of 'The Growth of Legal Tradition', yet he fills it up mostly with a number of ritual traditions. The other drawback is that he has put the Āthār of Successors and Companions under the name of Traditions. When he speaks about the 'Sunnah' he translates it as "the living tradition of ancient schools" and when he speaks about the legal decision of the scholars, then he puts them under the aegis of tradition, which causes more chaos and does not give a fair picture of the subject.

Argument about Schacht's examples of the growth of legal traditions.

Example 1.

Let us examine a few of his examples in this chapter. He says: "The evidence collected in the present chapter has been chosen with particular regard to this last point, and in a number of cases one or the other of the opponents himself states that he has no evidence other than that quoted by him, which does not include the tradition in question. This kind of conclusion e silentio is furthermore made safe by Tr. VIII, 11, where Shaibānī says: '[this is so] unless the Medinese can produce a tradition in support of their doctrine, but they have none, or they would have produced it'. Commenting on this statement, Schacht says: "We may safely assume that the legal traditions with which we are concerned were quoted as arguments by those whose doctrine they were intended to support, as soon as they were put into circulation"¹.

Here is the original text: « قال أبو حنيفة كل شيء يصاب به العبد من يد أو رجل فهو من قيمته على مقدار ذلك وقال أهل المدينة في موضحة العبد نصف عشر ثمنه ... فوافقوا أبا حنيفة في هذه الخصال الأربعة وقالوا فيما سوى ذلك ما نقص من ثمنه . قال محمد بن الحسن كيف جاز لأهل المدينة أن يتحكموا في هذا فيختاروا هذه الخصال الأربعة من بين الخصال ... فينبغي أن ينصف الناس ولا يتحكم فيقول قولوا بقول ما قلت من شيء إلا أن يأتي أهل المدينة فيما قالوا من هذا بأثر فتتقاد له . وليس عندهم في هذا أثر يفرقون به بين هذه الأشياء . فلو كان عندهم جاءوا به فيما سمعنا من آثارهم فإذا لم يكن هذا فينبغي الانصاف فاما أن يكون هذا على ما قال أبو حنيفة »

The first striking fact in the whole discussion is that there is neither a reference to the tradition from the Prophet nor to any other authority. The whole discussions concerns the decision of Abū Ḥanīfah about certain kinds of injuries to slaves and their compensations. The Medinite scholars agree with Abū Ḥanīfah in some cases and disagree in others. Al-Shaibānī, arguing with the Medinites, asks what is the reason for their discrimination in certain matters. Why do they follow Abū Ḥanīfah's decision only half-way? Have they any Athār to this effect? Let them bring it out; then the Iraqians would follow them in their discrimination. But they have nothing of this sort, so people need to be just...

It is astonishing how Professor Schacht was able to involve the tradition and its forgery in this context.

Example 2.

He says:

*Traditions later than "Ḥasan Baṣrī"*².

There is no tradition in the treatise ascribed to Ḥasan Baṣrī.

His statement would be valid if it could be proved that:

Ḥasan Baṣrī was the actual author of the work.

He cannot be ignorant of any tradition.

1. Origin. 140-1

2. Origin. 141.

But when the authenticity of the work is challenged, and Schacht himself does not accept it as the work of Ḥasan, then what reason does he have for his hypothesis? It might have been written by a member of Ahl al-Kalām or by any heretic or by anyone, but how would the consequences involve Ḥasan Baṣrī and forgery of Hadīth.

Example 3.

"Tradition originating between 'Ibrāhīm Nakha'ī' and Hammād"

"...Ibn Mas'ūd did not follow a certain practice... But there is a tradition in favour of the Practice polemically directed against the other opinion. The same tradition with another Iraqi isnād occurs in Tr. II, 19 (t)"¹.

The tradition concerns the prostration after the reciting of certain verses from Sūrah Sād. It is reported that Ibn Mas'ūd did not prostrate, but another tradition transmitted by Abū Ḥanīfah—Ḥammād — 'Abd al-Karīm — says the Prophet prostrated after reciting the verses from the *Sūrah Sād*², and also Ibn 'Uyaynah — Ayyūb — 'Ikrimah — Ibn 'Abbās — the Prophet did³. 'Umar — his father — Ibn Jubair — Ibn 'Abbās — the Prophet did⁴. These statements go quite contrary to Professor Schacht's assumption.

It is not a legal tradition but a purely ritual tradition.

Nobody can claim that Ibn Mas'ūd knew all the traditions and missed nothing.

There is no contradiction between these two traditions; one of them is a personal practice of a Companion who did not know the Prophet prostrated. The practice of the Prophet is reported by three different channels. How could the Iraqians persuade the Makkan, Ibn 'Uyaynah to fabricate and transmit traditions to this extent?

This tradition and similar ones shake the theory of Schacht. He says, "The name of Ibn Mas'ūd is usually an indication

1. Origin. 141.

2. A. Y. 207.

3. Shāfi'ī, Umm, vii, 174.

4. Shaibānī, Āthār, 72.

of the prevailing doctrine of the school of Kūfa"¹. And "Ibn Sa'd (vi, 232) identified Hammād's own doctrine with what Hammād put under the aegis of Ibrāhīm..."².

And "Judging from Āthār A. Y. and Āthār Shaib. which are the main sources of Ibrāhīm's doctrine...traditions transmitted by Ibrāhīm occur mostly in the legal chapters... and hardly at all in those devoted to purely religious... matters"³.

If Ibrāhīm and Ibn Mas'ūd were the source for the doctrine of the Kūfan school, as claimed by Schacht, then what was the necessity of attributing statements and practices to them which the Kūfans rejected themselves? Why did they not put their positive doctrine in their sponsor's mouth? If the Kūfans were unscrupulous and exploiting the names of these scholars, then why did they not keep quiet and erase the traditions, instead of weakening the personalities and damaging the prestige of their sponsors to the extent that those scholars were ignorant of certain traditions from the Prophet?

Professor Schacht points out that hardly any tradition from Ibrāhīm relates to purely religious matters. This is quite wrong. For example, the first chapter of A. Y. — Al-Wuḍū' is counted, and 29 Āthār out of 53 belong to Ibrāhīm.

Schacht has misreported the wording of Ibn Sa'd to blame Hammād. Ibn Sa'd reports Ibn Shaddād saying that he saw Hammād writing in the (lecture) of Ibrāhīm. He further reports on the authority of Al-Battī that when Hammād decided according to his opinion he was right and when he reported from an authority other than Ibrāhīm, he made a mistake⁴.

It means he was a good Muftī, and had sufficient knowledge of Ibrāhīm's doctrine and had even written from him, but when he transmitted from authorities other than Ibrāhīm, he made a mistake⁴. There is no mention of forgery.

It is suggested by Schacht—"Hammād transmitted traditions which had recently come into circulation, from the Prophet and from various Companions of the Prophet. These outside traditions, which did not belong to the 'Living Tradition' of the school and

1. Origin. 232.

2. Ibid., 238-9.

3. Ibid., 234.

4. Sa'd, vi, 232.

often contradicted it and Ḥammād's own doctrine, were the result of the rising pressure of the traditionists on the ancient school of law"¹.

But the problem is much more complicated than this statement suggests.

When late Kufan scholars Ḥammād etc. related Āthār from Ibrāhīm and Ibn Mas'ūd either they were really transmitted by them or were ascribed to them falsely as suggested by Schacht. In the second hypothesis, if the Kufans attributed certain traditions to their patrons and acted against them as they often did, it would mean that they themselves weakened the personalities of their sponsors by showing their ignorance. Consequently, it would mean that they cut the very branch on which they rested, and perhaps Ḥammād and Kufan scholars were wiser than this.

Therefore, what their scholars ascribed to certain authorities must have been taken from them.

According to Schacht, until 110 A.H. there was hardly any "Muḥammadan law". Ten or twenty years, which Ḥammād had at the beginning of the second century, was not sufficient even to lay the foundation of the ancient schools of law. Hence the existence of any traditionist movement against recently born or perhaps unborn schools, in such an early stage, is almost impossible. The theory of the rising pressure of the traditionist on the ancient schools of law is totally imaginary and, therefore, unacceptable.

Example 4.

"Tradition Originating between Mālik and the Classical Collections".

"Mālik adds to the text of a tradition from the Prophet his own definition of the aleatory contract mulāmasa... [and] the same definition appears as a statement of Mālik... But this interpretation has become part of the words of the Prophet in Bukhārī and Muslim"².

The early traditionists were quite aware of this kind of discrepancy. In every Uṣūl al-Ḥadīth work one finds a chapter on Mudraḥ, where problems of this sort are discussed. As far as this particular tradition is concerned, Bukhārī has given the exact

1. Origin. 239.

2. Origin. 144.

tradition transmitted by Mālik without any additional materials from Mālik's commentary. The additional material similar to Mālik's statement occurs in a tradition transmitted by 'Uqail—Ibn Shihāb—'Āmir b. Sa'd—Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī.

The commentators of the book have discussed this sentence, collecting all the material relative to this tradition. Some scholars describe it as the wording of Ibn 'Uyaynah, but Ibn Ḥajar has argued this point and says that this is the commentary of Abū Sa'id al-Khudrī¹. Hence, Mālik himself might have taken this definition.

Example 5.

Here is another example of forgery and falsification provided by Professor Schacht.

He makes the startling statement, "That the 'Practice' existed first and traditions from the Prophet and from Companions appeared later, is clearly stated in Mud. iv, 28, where Ibn Qāsim gives a theoretical justification of the Medinese point of view. He says: 'This tradition has come down to us, and if it were accompanied by a practice passed to those from whom we have taken it over by their own predecessors, it would be right to follow it. But in fact it is like those other traditions which are not accompanied by practice. [Here Ibn Qāsim gives examples of traditions from the Prophet and from the Companions]. But these things could not assert themselves and take root..."

"The practice was different, and the whole community and the Companions themselves acted on other rules. So the traditions remained neither discredited [in principle] nor adopted in practice, ... and actions were ruled by other traditions which were accompanied by Practice"... "The Medinese thus oppose 'practice' to traditions"². An unwarranted remark! Ibn Qāsim's whole discussion is based on the point that there are two sorts of traditions: one group which is accompanied by the practices of the Companions and the Successors, and another group which is not accompanied by any sort of practice. So, if there were a conflict between these two groups, then the one accompanied by the practice would be preferred. Where does he indicate that the practice came first and the tradition later?

Example 6.

Schacht says: "Ibrāhīm is aware that the imprecation against political enemies during the ritual prayer is an innovation introduced only under 'Alī and Mu'āwiyah some considerable time after the Prophet. He confirms this by pointing out the absence of any information on the matter from the Prophet, Abū Bakr and 'Umar". [Āthār A.Y. 349-52, etc]. "It follows that the tradition, which claims the Prophet's example for this addition to the ritual and which Shāfi'ī of course accepts, must be later than Ibrāhīm"¹.

Here are the quotations from A.Y. 349-52:

- آثار أبي يوسف. ٣٤٩/ ابو حنيفة-حماد-ابراهيم-ان النبي لم يفت في الفجر الا شهرا واحدا
 ٣٥٠/ ابو حنيفة-حماد-ابراهيم-علقمة-عبدالله-عن النبي مثله
 ٣٥١/ ابو حنيفة-حماد-ابراهيم-ان ابا بكر لم يفت
 ٣٥٢/ ابو حنيفة-حماد-ابراهيم-ان عليا قنت يدعو على معاوية حين حاربه....

There is one tradition with complete Isnād and another one with Mursal isnād, both narrated by Ibrāhīm, describing the practice of the Prophet. After this clear reference, it is astonishing how Professor Schacht can make his abovementioned statement while he refers to the same Āthār!

The criticism of tradition as carried out by Schacht in this context is entirely irrelevant and quite unacceptable.

Schacht as the Critic of Hadith on Material Grounds.

Mūsā b. 'Uqbah died in about 140 A.H. His book Kitāb al-Maghāzī has been incorporated in later works², and a few pages in extract form have survived. E. Sachau edited the extract and published it in 1904³. After half a century, Schacht wrote an article¹ contradicting the opinion of the earlier scholar Sachau. He describes it thus: "The contents of the extracts are the kind of traditions we should expect about the middle of the second century...[Tradition] No. 6 tries to mitigate, in favour of the ruling dynasty, the episode in which its ancestor 'Abbās, fighting against the Prophet, was captured by the Muslims and had to be ransomed; No. 9, which denies privileges in penal law to the descendants of the Prophet, is anti-Alid; No. 10 praises the Anṣār and, by implication, the pro-Abbasid party in Medina"².

"Abbāsīd traces are unmistakable; the strong anti-Alid tendency and, particularly, the favourable attitude to the Caliphate of Abū Bakr even point to a period somewhat later than the very first years of 'Abbāsīd rule. It would hardly be possible to consider Mūsā himself the author..."³.

Before the discussion it is better to note the Arabic text for easy reference⁴.

1. Guillaume has remarked on the fragment of Mūsā, saying, "Clearly Mūsā's sympathies lay with the family of al-Zubayr and the Anṣār. They alone emerge with credit. The 'Alids on the other hand, are no better than anyone else. The Umayyads are implicitly condemned for the slaughter at al-Harra, and al-'Abbās is shown to have been a rebel against the Prophet who was forced to pay for his opposition to him to the uttermost farthing"¹.

Now it is obvious that Guillaume takes the incident of 'Abbās, (Tr. No. 6) as a sign of anti-'Abbāsid feeling, while Schacht finds in it pro-'Abbāsid elements!! 'Abbās was the uncle of the Prophet. According to Eastern custom, uncles are given rank near to the father. It is quite natural that the man was the brother of the Prophet's father; people wanted to honour him for the sake of the Prophet. Had the Prophet pardoned him, it would have been natural, but the Prophet strongly rejected this recommendation and he had to pay to 'the uttermost farthing'. So, the Prophet did not show any kind of mercy, and did not adopt any lenient policy towards him. Therefore, Schacht's claim that it is in favour of the Abbasids is unacceptable.

Furthermore, if it were fabricated in the 'Abbāsid period and moulded to serve the ruling party, then why was not the whole story changed? Why did the 'Abbāsids not try to clear their forefathers? It was possible at least to drop the last sentence of the Prophet's wording and he would not have been shown paying the uttermost farthing! Moreover, if it were fabricated against 'Alids, so why not in the first century? Were there no wars between 'Alids and the Umayyads in the first century, and was not Zuhri working in Umayyad courts?

Therefore, on what grounds can one accept that this tradition or episode came into existence in the mid-second century and did not exist earlier? Moreover the same episode is accepted by Shi'ites as a fact².

1. Guillaume, Sīrah Ibn Ishāq, Introduction, xlvi.

2. Al-Majlisī, Bihār, ix, 273-4.

2. No. 10. Praises the Anṣār and by implication the pro-'Abbāsid party in Medina, and then would be anti-'Alid as well. But the same tradition is repeated by Shi'ite theologians, traditionists and commentators, time after time¹. It is doubtful that the Shi'ites, who denounced all the Companions of the Prophet except a few and expelled them from Islam, were so unaware that they quoted this tradition time after time and only Professor Schacht was able to notice this anti-Alid element.

Guillaume found it anti-Umayyad, as they are condemned for the slaughter at al-Harrah. But who would praise any army or government in the world who slaughtered the population in this way?

Moreover, the Anṣār gave the Prophet shelter when his own tribe tried to kill him and he was forced to migrate from his birth-place, Mecca. The Anṣār defended him, fought with him, offered sacrifices of lives and wealth for his mission. So, if he would not have praised them, he would have been ungrateful. Why do we have to wait until the mid-second century for this tradition to be born, particularly when there are verses in the *Qur'ān*², in praise of them?

Furthermore, one does not find sentences in praise of Anṣār in this tradition. The Prophet asks God for the pardon of these people. It is a very simple matter. The Prophet was commanded—according to the *Qur'ān*³—to ask pardon of God for the people.

3. No. 9 is anti-'Alid as it denies the privilege in penal law to the descendants of the Prophet. But where has the Prophet himself acquired a privilege in penal law, and where has he said that he was above the law? We find that he offered himself for the Qisās. What sources have we, where the Prophet or his descendants are described as being above the law? Is it not the superiority of the law and the equality of subjects that is the right thing? So where is the anti-'Alid element in it? 'Alī himself never claimed that he was above the law.

Furthermore, as a matter of fact it is not a separate tradition but a part of No. 8. Sachau was misled, due to the occurrence of

1. Al-Majlisī, Bihār xxi, 159-60; Ṭabrisī, Majma' al-Bayān v, 18-20; see also Ibn Abū Ḥadīd, Nahaj al-Balāghah, ii, 252.

3. The Qur'ān, iii, 159.

the isnād twice as well as the word Rasūl Allāh, and so he split one tradition into two. Professor Schacht follows him without proper attention. In this case Tradition No. 9 does not refer to any penal law's privilege or its condemnation. It refers simply to the case of Usāmah: when the Prophet said that Usāmah was the dearest of all he did not exempt from it even his own daughter Fāṭimah. Ṭayālīsī transmits a tradition from Hammād from Mūsā b. 'Uqbah. It reads:

كان رسول الله يقول « اسامة احب الناس إلى ولم يستثن فاطمة ولا غيرها » طس/ ١٨١٢

This is another question of love, whether he loved Usāmah more than his daughter or vice-versa, because the relation of love has many aspects. So it could not be taken as an anti-'Alid sentiment.

Professor Schacht has later on discussed this 'fictitious isnād' of Tr. No. 8 and some other relative problems. To him, error is not human nature and everything is 'projected back'!

This extract is not an original work, but a work copied and recopied and just an extract. At the time of editing no other copy was available, so any discrepancy occurring in one copy in due course would remain in other copies. Even the great scholar Sachau has made a blunder in copying the text and has changed the complete tradition from a positive to a negative sense. In No. 12 he has copied: ... ان الله لا يؤيد الدين بالرجل الفاجر while it is quite clear in the manuscript¹ ان الله ليؤيد الدين بالرجل الفاجر. So there is always a possibility of miscopying, and it becomes more likely when the same word such as 'Uqbah occurs with the name of two narrators. The later part of No. 9 is a part of No. 8, and No. 9 has complete isnād; such is the case of No. 8 where the scribe committed an error. Hence, in this case Schacht's remarks are rendered irrelevant.

To say that no one has transmitted the work of Mūsā except his nephew² has been proved wrong historically³. Now, there are two documents still existing which have Traditions No. 8 and 9 as one complete incident. One of them is as old as Ismā'il b. Ibrāhīm. It is transmitted by Ibrāhīm b. Ṭahmān directly and is a part of Ibrāhīm's collection¹ and another is Al-Ṭabarānī (d. 360 A.H.) who has preserved this tradition transmitting through 'Abd al-'Aziz b. Mukhtār from Mūsā b. 'Uqbah².

Therefore, in criticizing the earlier scholars we must be more cautious, as most of the early sources are unavailable. The arguments of Schacht and the discussion in this chapter make it clear that the method, mood and generalization from a single incident serve, in the long run, neither research nor scholars.

Some further examples.

Schacht, in his article "Foreign elements in ancient Islamic law", says that "There is a maxim in Islamic law that 'the child belongs to the [marriage] bed'. This maxim, which was intended to decide disputes about paternity, has been regarded, on insufficient evidence, as an authentic rule of pre-Islamic Arab practice, but Goldziher has shown that it had not yet prevailed in the middle Umayyad period, say about A.H. 75. In the middle of the second century, it had been put into the mouth of the Prophet, but it is, strictly speaking, incompatible with the Koranic rulings regarding paternity, and in Islamic law as it exists the maxim, though often quoted, is never taken at its face value... It is likely that the maxim, which agrees neither with old Arab custom nor with the Koran, but has its parallel in the Roman legal maxim... penetrated from outside into Islamic discussions, though it did not succeed in modifying positive law"³.

The statement is based on misunderstanding of the tradition and on eliminating half of it. This tradition is transmitted by more than twenty Companions, the number of their students and localities and growth of isnāds being tremendous. Their agreement to forge this tradition and put it in the mouth of the Prophet is impossible⁴. The tradition is also transmitted by Zuhri (d. 124) and is part of the manuscript edited with the present work.

The wording of the tradition is الولد للفراش وللعاهر الحجر. It is not clear why Schacht did not mention the complete Hadīth. It is hardly possible that Roman law punishes the adulterer with stoning to death—the penalty which is mentioned in this Hadīth.

The tradition has unanimously been accepted amongst all the Muslim sects¹. Mu'āwiyah was denounced on the basis on this tradition when he accepted Ziyād b. Abih².

To say that it is against Qura'nic law—as claimed by Schacht—means that such an expounder has neither a clear idea of the Qura'nic Law of Iddah, nor of the tradition, nor of its meaning, nor yet of the time when this tradition was announced by the Prophet.

The Prophet announced this tradition in 8 A.H. at Makkah after the victory. There arose a case of paternity, and two people differed about a child. Then to put an end to the old custom, and to uproot it and to promulgate the new law, this maxim was announced³.

As for Goldziher's showing that it had not yet prevailed about 75 A.H., examination shows that Goldziher was misunderstanding the text. He refers to Arṭāt b. Zufar who was born on the bed of Zufar and it was assumed that his real father was Darār, and so there was some trouble about his paternity. When he grew up his father wanted to take him back but did not succeed. It means that the boy was given the Nasab of the man upon whose bed he was born.

Furthermore, this incident most probably occurred in the early days of the Prophet, as Arṭāt was born at that time. It is clear from his discussion with 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān where it is stated that he was too old وكان قد اسن and had lost interest in everything, even in life itself⁴. Therefore this man was neither born about 75 A.H., nor did the case of paternity arise at that time, but this date is when he was awaiting death, after a long life of 80 or 90 years.

Another example: "Mutilation as a punishment for coin-clippers and counterfeiters is advocated by spurious "traditions" quoted in Balādhurī, ibid 470. R.S. Lopez, in Byzantion, xvi, 445 ff, has suggested a Byzantine origin. If this is correct, it would be a case of proposed adoption of a judicial practice which existed in the conquered territories"¹.

In Balādhurī, there are references to the practice of Marwān and Abān b. 'Uthmān who punished coin-clippers by flogging or chopping off the hand. But there is no tradition: neither spurious nor authentic. Thus his statement is wrong. Furthermore, if they punished, and Romans also used to punish this crime, then to claim that it might have been taken from them is ridiculous. It is doubtful whether any government would reward the coin-clippers for their "fine-art" and "handskill". It is natural that every government would punish them.

Wensinck as the critic of tradition of five pillars of Islam on material ground — a refutation.

The standard of criticism of Hadīth on material grounds, as is shown, is very poor, unreasonable and based on sheer ignorance. The same standard is demonstrated by Wensinck, in his work Muslim Creed. He discusses the authenticity of the tradition of Five Pillars of Islam. In his imagination it must be the work of Companions many decades later, after the death of the Prophet, when the Muslims felt the need to make a formula of their creed, i.e., Shahādah. As the tradition of five pillars contains Shahādah it cannot be an authentic saying of the Prophet. Wensinck knew quite well that this Shahādah is the part of Tashahhud which every worshipper has to recite after every two Rak'ah². Instead of modifying his theory in the light of this knowledge he produced another theory that the Salāt was also standardized after the death of the Prophet³.

The command for prayer occurs about 99 times in the *Qur'ān*¹, and in traditions it amounts to thousands. So it is inconceivable that the Prophet only ordered them and did not teach the prayer and left it to Companions to standardize it. But the trouble does not end here. The prayer in Islam is collective, five times a day. The passages in the Qur'ān refer to and command the collective prayers, and even show the actual practice. So, in 1 or 2 A.H. Adhān was introduced², and there is no reason whatsoever to reject the very early existence of this system. The Qur'ān itself refers to *Adhān*³. This very Shahādah forms the part of Adhān and the part of Iqāmah which is recited before the commencing of actual prayers. It is not clear at what date Professor Wensinck would like to introduce this system into Islam. If it is accepted that Adhān was introduced in the lifetime of the Prophet, as it actually was, the entire hair-splitting argument about forgery of the tradition of five pillars becomes nonsense, and all the deductions and theories based on that theory need to be radically revised.

- Ibn Abū 'Arūbah (d. 156), Kitāb al-Manāsik, Part I.
- Ibn Ishāq (d. 151) a portion of al-Maghāzī.
- Ibn Juraij (d. 150), his traditions.
- Ibn Ṭahmān (d. 168), first part of his traditions.
- Nāfi', client of Ibn 'Umar (d. 117), his traditions.
- Suhail b. Abū Ṣāliḥ (d. 138), his Nuskhah.
- Al-Thaurī (d. 161), Part I of his traditions.
- Yazīd b. Abū Ḥabīb (d. 128), his traditions transmitted by al-Laith.
- Zubair b. 'Adī (d. 135), a forged copy.
- Al-Zuhri (d. 124), his traditions transmitted by Shu'aib.

These fragments contain more than 1,000 traditions. I intended to edit all of them. As time passed I realized that it would be almost impossible to edit all these traditions on the standard which was set for the work. Therefore the smallest was chosen, which contained only 48 traditions, which were derived from Abū Hurairah. All the traditions of this Nuskhah have the same isnād.

Suhail — his father Abū Ṣāliḥ — Abū Hurairah.

The Method of Editing.

In editing the work of Suhail the following method has been adopted for every tradition:

To trace the different students of Abū Hurairah who transmitted this particular tradition.

To trace the different students of Abū Ṣāliḥ who transmitted the same tradition from him.

To trace the different students of Suhail who transmitted the same tradition from him.

Later on, it is attempted to discover whether or not some other Companions of the Prophet transmitted ahādith on the subject.

If there were other Companions who transmitted traditions on the subject, then the channels of the narrations are traced down mostly to the third rank in isnād.

A comparison between the wording of the different students of Abū Hurairah — in general terms — has been made.

Finally, the evidence of other Companions is added to compare — in wider issues — with the traditions of Abū Hurairah.

The names of the narrators of the traditions are mostly given to the third rank in the isnāds.

An attempt has been made to find those people who transmitted particular traditions from more than one source.

I have also attempted to find out how many times Ibn Ḥanbal has endorsed this particular tradition in his Musnad on the authority of Abū Hurairah and how many times on the authority of others.

Notes on the references. For the most part, the method of Wensinck in the Concordance has been followed except where the volume numbers and pages, or the numbers of the tradition, are given. Not all the books adopt the method of the Concordance, so, in some cases, there are certain discrepancies in numbering the chapters.

The reasons for confining the names of transmitters to the third rank of isnāds are:

It would add to the volume of material very much if we go any further.

Most of these people belong to the early half of the second century of the Hijrah. Therefore, it would be useful to find out how a certain tradition flourished and the numbers of narrators with their localities, to see whether it was practically possible — at that time — to fabricate a tradition and attribute it to the Prophet or a certain authority.

Other Manuscripts.

Besides the Nuskhah of Suhail, there are two other manuscripts which have been added to the second part of the work. One of them belongs to Nāfi' and the other to Al-Zuhri.

Nāfi' and al-Zuhri were both the most important sources of Mālik for his book, Muwatta'. Therefore, only the references to Muwatta' are given to check the method of narration and transmission. The text, thus, would provide valuable material for the further study of the subject by comparing different narrators of Nāfi's and al-Zuhri's students.

The study reveals the degree of scrupulousness and adherence to the original text.

The third manuscript in this series has the traditions of al-Zubair b. 'Adī. According to Ibn Ḥibbān it is a forged *Nuskhah*¹ نسخة موضوعة and therefore its traditions cannot be taken as genuine. A photocopy of the manuscript is attached, with footnotes showing several Ahādith of this Nuskhah which occur in the classical collections of al-Bukhārī and Muslim. This reveals the fact that when the traditionists described certain traditions as forged, it did not necessarily mean that the materials were spurious. It only implies that the method of receiving the documents was improper according to their standards. The subject matter may or may not be false.

NUSKHAH OF SUHAIL.

Authorship.

It is entitled on the first page.

جزء فيه نسخة عبد العزيز بن المختار البصري عن سهيل بن أبي صالح عن أبيه

1. See supra, p. 182; Mizān, 1,316.

But at the end of the Juz' is written: آخر نسخة سهيل بن أبي صالح

The early writers were not so precise in describing the authorship¹.

The work belongs to Suhail, because:

Al-Dhahabī, quoting Ibn 'Adī, has described Suhail as having many *Nuskhah*².

He had a Nuskhah from his father³.

Suhail sent the traditions of his father in writing to Wuhaib⁴.

Comparison of the wordings of Suhail's students shows that the wording of this manuscript tally with that of Wuhaib. There are a few other features common to Wuhaib's Nuskhah and that of 'Abd al-'Azīz, e.g.

1. Tr. No. 9 Wuhaib and 'Abd al-'Azīz transmitted: من ادرك من ادرك ركعتين من العصر but most of the narrators transmitted ركعة. The other students of Suhail who transmitted this tradition sometimes transmitted من ادرك ركعة من العصر and at others ركعتين من العصر.

2. Tr. No. 17. Suhail was informed by 'Ubaid Allāh that Abū Ṣāliḥ added one more sentence in this particular tradition. Two students of Suhail, namely Hammād and al-Zuhrī, did not mention this incident. Two other students of Suhail, Jarīr and Khālid, mentioned it with a difference in the wording of conversation, but the wording of Wuhaib and 'Abd al-'Azīz b. al-Mukhtār are the same.

3. Tr. No 18. Three students of Suhail, namely Hammād, Jarīr and al-Thaurī who transmitted this tradition, inserted the name of 'Abd Allāh b. Dīnār, between Suhail and his father, and only Wuhaib and 'Abd al-'Azīz did not insert the name. In the same tradition there is the word شك and this is not found in Wuhaib's work. This word شك even suggests the late reading of 'Abd al-'Azīz to Suhail because Suhail became mentally weak and thus, perhaps, he doubted. So, the word شك was used by 'Abd al-'Azīz.

4. There are traditions transmitted from Suhail only by his two students, Wuhaib and 'Abd al-'Azīz, e.g., 6, 10, 13.

A part of the Nuskhah of Wuhaib is preserved by Ibn Ḥanbal in Musnad ii, 388-9, who transmitted it on the authority of 'Affān.

Summing up, the early scholars have mentioned books —Nuskhah— in possession of Suhail, and as he had the Nuskhah from his father and as he wrote down his father's traditions and sent them to Wuhaib and as the wording of these two Nuskhahs and some very uncommon features are found only in these two Nuskhahs, and as at the end of the manuscript is given نسخة سهيل بن أبي صالح, so it is almost certain that the work was compiled by Suhail, and 'Abd al-'Azīz was no more than a narrator. Most probably these two Nuskhahs were either copied from the original of Suhail, or the Nuskhah of 'Abd al-'Azīz was copied from the Nuskhah of Wuhaib.

Authenticity of the Work.

All of its traditions have been transmitted through different channels and have been quoted time after time in all the works on traditions.

The Chain of Transmitters of the Nuskhah.

The Nuskhah was copied out at the end of the sixth century of the Hijrah, as it is obvious from the first line of the manuscript. The chain of the transmitters from the author to the last transmitter is as follows:

Abū al-Futūḥ Yūsuf b. al-Mubārak (527-601)¹.

Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. 'Abd al-Bāqī al-Bazzāz (442-535)².

 Abū Ṣāliḥ⁶
 Abū Hurairah

The Nuskhah has an uninterrupted chain, and the narrators are trustworthy, except Muḥammad b. 'Abdah b. Ḥarb (d. 313) who was a Hanafi and Chief Justice of Egypt, and a great patron of the Hanafi scholar, Abū Ja'far al-Ṭahāwī. His character has been criticized. Hanafi sources are not available to examine the charges. There are scholars who have explained that the charges were unfair⁷.

He is a very late narrator and the work has been absorbed in much earlier collections, he does not create any difficulty in its acceptance, though the traditionists may not agree.

The Location of the Manuscript.

The original manuscript belongs to al-Zāhirīyah Library, Damascus, no. Majmū' 107, Folio 155-160. It was dedicated to al-Madrasah al-Ḍiyā'iyah. The fragment is a part of a big volume which contains many other works.

The size of the original book is 18 cm. X 13 cm., and the writing covers a space of about 15 cm. X 10½ cm. It looks as if the manuscript was copied out in 598 A.H. as the date appears in the beginning of the Nuskhah. The date is confirmed from the reading certificate written in 598 A.H. The copy was made from an older manuscript which had the reading certificates in 455 A.H. as well as 535 A.H.

The work contains several readings and autographs of the

THE SECOND MANUSCRIPT.

Al-Juz' min Hadīth 'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Umar.

The Authorship of the Work.

According to Ibn Ḥibbān, 'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Umar had a Nuskhah from Nāfi'. It is not clear how it was written. The sources describe how Nāfi' had the traditions of Ibn 'Umar in written form. Nāfi' dictated traditions to his students and also sent them in writing. It is not clear whether 'Ubaid Allāh copied it himself or wrote in dictation, or whether or not he showed it to Nāfi' to correct it, as Nāfi' asked students to bring their copies for corrections¹.

'Ubaid Allāh was a very great authority on the traditions of Nāfi'; and Mūsā b. 'Uqbah, the famous historian, brought the book containing Nāfi's traditions to 'Ubaid Allāh to read, as he had not read those traditions to Nāfi'².

Authenticity of the Work.

It has not been edited thoroughly and only references to Mālik's Muwatta' are provided, yet it is almost certain that all its contents would be found in classical literature.

The Transmission of the Nuskhah.

This Nuskhah has reached us through the following channels:

Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-Silafi (472-576)³.

 Nāfi'⁶.

The original manuscript belongs to al-Zāhiriyyah Library, Damascus, which bears the number Majmū' 105, Folio 135 to 149. This is part of a big volume which contains many other small works.

The size of the original volume is 17.5 cm. X 13 cm. and the writing space is about 14.5 cm. X 10 cm. Its heading reads Al-Juz' min Hadith 'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Umar.

The manuscript was copied by 'Abd al-Ghanī b. Muḥammad al-Muqrī on Saturday, 29th of Rabī' al-Awwal, 576 A.H.

After copying, it was compared with another copy as is mentioned on Folio 149 b. The last tradition does not belong to this collection, so the last of al-'Umari's tradition is written on Folio 149a.

The second folio (136b-137a) of this manuscript was lost and supplied by another hand. The difference between the two scripts is quite clear. It is mentioned even in the reading certificate. The first reading certificate, dated 24 Rabī' al-Awwal, 596, has no reference to this missing page but another reading certificate which has the date 12 Jumādā al-ūlā, 732, states explicitly at the beginning of the reading that the second Warqah is missing. Another reading note which is dated 735 does not mention this missing portion and most probably this missing page was copied from another manuscript still existing at that time and perhaps it was supplied before 735 A.H. There are some other reading certificates dated 637 and 739 A.H.

THE THIRD MANUSCRIPT.

Aḥādith Abū al-Yamān...

جزء فيه احاديث ابي اليان الحكم بن نافع و..

The Authorship of the Work.

The work undoubtedly belongs to al-Zuhrī, though it is entitled Juz' Fih Aḥādith Abū al-Yamān.

Abū al-Yamān did not even read these traditions to his teacher Shu'aib, who gave him permission to transmit on his authority when he was on his death-bed.

Shu'aib was the scribe of al-Zuhrī, who was sent by the Caliph Hishām to write traditions for him from al-Zuhrī. Al-Zuhrī dictated traditions to him and thus he wrote them for Hishām, and most probably made a copy of them for himself. Abū al-Yamān borrowed these books from the son of Shu'aib¹.

Ibn Hanbal had seen Shu'aib's books and was very much impressed by their neatness and the beautiful handwriting.

The Authenticity of the Work.

Shu'aib has a very good reputation among traditionists. Most of the traditions of the Nuskhah are found in the Saḥīh work of al-Bukhārī.

As the source of these traditions is al-Zuhrī, who has been gravely accused by some modern scholars, his life and character need thorough investigation, which will be carried out after the description of the Nuskhah.

The Transmission of the Nuskhah.

This Nuskhah was copied out in 519 A.H., and through the following channel it reaches its compiler:

'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Muḥammad, Abū Maṣṣūr².
 Muḥammad b. al-Ḥasan al-Saffār³.

Al-Zuhri⁵.

The original manuscript belongs to al-Zāhiriyyah Library, Damascus, which bears No. Majmū' 120, Folio 68-87. This small portion is a part of a big volume.

Its heading reads: Juz' fih Ahādīth Abū al-Yamān al-Hakam b. Nāfi' wa Ahādīth Abū Dhūwālah wa Ahādīth Yahyā b. Ma'in wa ghairihī.

Ahādīth Abū al-Yamān begins from Folio 70a and ends at Folio 80a.

The size of the volume is 16.5 cm by 10.5 c. and the writing space approximately 15 cm by 9 cm.

The manuscript was copied in 519 A.H., and was read to 'Abd al-Raḥīm b. Muḥammad al-Shīrāzī in the same year. The manuscript was read to him again in the same year in the Public Library of Shīrāz. It has more than twenty reading certificates and perhaps the last certificate is dated 732. A.H.

It was dedicated by the famous traditionist al-Ḥāfiẓ 'Abd al-Ghanī to — perhaps at Madrasah — al-Dīyā'iyah at Qāsiyūn.

LIFE AND WORKS OF MUHAMMAD B. MUSLIM B. 'UBAID ALLĀH B. SHIHĀB AL-ZUHRI (51-124)⁶.

He was one of the most celebrated traditionists and one of the early writers in the history of Islamic literature.

It is reported that his grandfather, 'Abd Allāh b. Shihāb, fought on the side of the polytheists against the Prophet at Badr and Uhud¹.

His father, Muslim b. 'Ubaid Allāh, was on the side of Ibn al-Zubair against the Umayyad dynasty². He transmitted traditions from Abū Hurairah³.

His Education.

It seems that al-Zuhri was very poor in his early days and his family was dependent upon him⁴. He was a gifted child; poverty could not prevent him from learning. His memory was excellent, so that he was able to memorize the whole Qur'ān within three months⁵. Later, he devoted his time to the study of poetry and genealogy, favourite subjects of Arabs. He memorized a great deal of the poetry⁶ and was himself a poet⁷. Probably he was in his twenties when, due to a certain incident, he turned to the study of the traditions⁸. He transmitted only two traditions⁹ directly from Ibn 'Umar while he lived with him in the same city for twenty-four years. Had he been interested in the subject a little earlier or had he been a liar, he would have related many more than two traditions from Ibn 'Umar. He was a very keen learner and active student. He used to serve his teacher 'Ubaid Allāh so that he was thought to be his servant¹⁰. He also accompanied Ibn al-Musayyab for a long period of at least seven years. In his early life he was very selective regarding his teachers. He studied mostly under the famous scholars of Muhājirīn families, e.g., 'Urwah, 'Ubaid Allāh, 'Abd Allāh b. Tha'libah, etc.

Historians have preserved many interesting testimonies of his colleagues about him. Abū Zinād says, "I used to go about with al-Zuhri, who had tablets and sheets of paper with him, for which we laughed at him, but he used to write down all he heard''¹. Šālih b. Kaisān and al-Zuhrī learnt together. Al-Zuhrī suggested that they write traditions. So they wrote all that come from the Prophet. Ibn Kaisān adds, "Furthermore, he (al-Zuhrī) suggested that we should write down what had come from the Companions, because it was also Sunnah. I said, 'It was not Sunnah', so he wrote down and I did not. Eventually he succeeded and I failed''². Ma'mar reports of his teacher, al-Zuhrī, that he sometimes even wrote on the soles of his shoes³. It appears that he collected books in quantity and used to spend his time with them. His wife used to say, "I swear by God, these books are harder for me to bear than three co-wives''⁴.

His Reputation and Place in the Traditionists' Circle.

'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz admired him, and advised people to attend his study circle and make use of his knowledge⁵. The traditionists agree unanimously that he was an authority on Sunnah and a most trustworthy scholar⁶.

His Literary Career.

1. The Maghāzī of the Prophet.

Undoubtedly he compiled a book on the Maghāzī. However, it is difficult to say whether the method he employed in compiling the work was originated by him or he followed someone else. If we compare him with 'Urwah, we find that al-Zuhrī uses a somewhat different style. Al-Zuhrī collected information about incidents from various sources, then instead of passing on the material in the form of separate statements with the name of their transmitters, he wove them all into a full, complete and comprehensive statement of incidents. Here is a quotation. "Al-Zuhrī related to me on the authority of 'Alqamah b. Waqqās..., Sa'id, 'Urwah b. al-Zubair and 'Ubaid Allāh b. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Utbah.

Al-Zuhrī said, every one of them related a portion of this Hadīth, and some of them had more information than others. I have collected for you all that has been related to me by them''¹. On the other hand the work of 'Urwah transmitted by al-Zuhrī has a composite isnād of two men, Marwān and Miswar. As none of these works is available in its original form, it is difficult, even dangerous, to make any definite comment on their method of compilation. 'Urwah, perhaps, originated this style and later on it was developed by al-Zuhrī.

It looks as if the work of al-Zuhrī was mainly planned on the scheme of 'Urwah. Some quotations, as well as headings of the chapters of both works, have been preserved by al-Ṭabarānī in his Mu'jam Kabīr, and mostly they are placed side by side. It is quite clear from the quotations that the work of al-Zuhrī was very extensive. The headings, for example, read as below:

Names of the persons who attended 'Uqbah Bai'at'².

Names of the persons who were killed in the battle of Badr³, and of Uḥud⁴, and of Khandaq⁵, and of Ajnādīn⁶.

He gives full details of different tribes who joined the war. The work has been preserved in quotation form in several sources⁷. In his work, Mūsā b. 'Uqbah has included almost the whole work of al-Zuhrī, so that Yaḥyā b. Ma'īn said that the best on al-Maghāzī was the book of Mūsā from al-Zuhrī⁸.

There are a few pages published with Jāmi' of Ibn Wahb, which appear to be a part of al-Zuhrī's work on the *Maghāzī*⁹.

2. The Sīrah.

Al-Iṣfahānī reports that Khālīd al-Qasrī asked al-Zuhrī to compile a book on the *Sīrah*¹⁰. It is not clear whether the request was fulfilled and whether the book referred to, which has just been mentioned, was in response to al-Qasrī's request or an independent work.

3. Memoranda about the Umayyad Caliphs.

He compiled some historical memoranda about the Umayyad Caliphs; a chronological list of the births, deaths, and extents of their reigns. Al-Ṭabarī has preserved two quotations from this work¹.

4. A Book on Genealogy.

He also compiled a book on the genealogy of his tribe².

5. The Book on Nāsikh and Mansūkh.

From the statement of al-Ḥāzimī, it seems as if al-Zuhrī compiled a work on the subject of Nāsikh and Mansūkh Hadīth as well³.

6. The Collection of Traditions.

He was asked by 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz to write traditions⁴. After being copied out, these books were sent to different cities⁵. A lengthy quotation from the work on the subject of taxation is preserved by Abū 'Ubaid al-Qāsim b. Sallām. It is obvious from the quotation that these three pages are a small portion of a lengthy book⁶.

7. His Other Literary Activities.

He dictated, twice, four hundred traditions to one of Hishām's sons⁷.

8. Hishām b. 'Abd al-Malik sent two scribes to him who accompanied him for one year to write from him¹.

9. More than fifty of his students had his traditions in writing².

Further he had 'ready-made' collections of Hadīth which were given by him to many scholars and students³.

10. In the later period, it looks as if the collections of Hadīth on the authority of al-Zuhrī were made for most of the nobles of the Caliph's palace. Shu'aib b. Abū Ḥamzah was employed for this purpose⁴. There is a statement of Ma'mar which confirms this. According to his report, the books of al-Zuhrī were brought on ponies after the assassination of al-Walid⁵.

Al-Zuhrī's Relations with his Students.

He was very generous to the needy. Having been very poor in his early life, he knew what poverty meant. So when he had some income, he did not accumulate the money and always tried to help the poor. Al-Laith b. Sa'd, a very generous man himself, describes al-Zuhrī's generosity saying: "I have not seen a man more generous than Ibn Shihāb. He used to help everyone who came to him, and if he had nothing left, he used to borrow"⁶.

Al-Zuhrī and the Equality of Students.

Though he had been very selective in his teachers, yet he was himself fair to all his students. He did not make any kind of discrimination between the rich and the poor. When he dictated traditions to Hishām's son, he related at once the same traditions to other students⁷.

Al-Zuhri and the Diffusion of Knowledge.

It was the general attitude of that time that the teachers could hardly be brought to speak. The students had to accompany them and when their teachers spoke they wrote it down or memorized it. Al-Zuhri says: "People used to sit with Ibn 'Umar, but none dare call upon him till someone came and asked him. We sat with Ibn al-Musayyab without questioning him, till someone came and questioned him; the question roused him to impart Hadith to us or he began to impart at his own will"¹.

Quite contrary to the pattern of the time, al-Zuhri was very approachable as a teacher. It looks as if he followed, in his early days, the method of his teachers. He did not want to communicate his knowledge very freely, but later flexibility appeared in his attitude. Walid b. Muslim informs us that when al-Zuhri came out of 'Abd al-Malik's meeting, he sat near by the pillar and called the traditionists, "O people, we forbade you something which we delivered to those (Amirs). Come here, I will relate to you"².

His Attitude towards the Writing of Hadith.

He, like other Successors, wrote down the traditions for his own use, but was not in favour of making them public. One who wants to learn must strive, and the students should not be given any 'ready-made' knowledge in the shape of books or regular dictations³.

The first change in his attitude came when he was asked by 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz to write the traditions, and later on he was persuaded by Hisham.

Abu al-Mulaih says, "We could not strive to write in the meetings (lectures) of al-Zuhri, till Hisham compelled him, then he wrote for Hisham's sons and then the people wrote tradition..."⁴. This incident as well as al-Zuhri's reaction is found in the following statement of al-Zuhri: عن الزهري قال: كنا نكره كتاب العلم حتى اكرهنا عليه هؤلاء الامراء فرأينا ان لا تمنعه احدا من المسلمين "We had an aversion to recording knowledge, till these Amirs forced us to do it; then we were of the opinion that we should not withhold it from any of the Muslims"¹.

Dr. A. Sprenger translates this statement as follows: "Zohry said according to Ma'mar: "We disapproved of writing down hadythes to such an extent, that we induced also those chiefs (who are not mentioned) to disapprove of it, but at last we saw that no Moslim forbids writing"². The translation is not clear, and it gives a different interpretation. Guillaume's conclusion is rather strange. He says, "If any external proof were needed of the forgery of tradition in the Umayyad period, it may be found in the express statement of Al-Zuhri: 'These princes have compelled us to write Hadith'"³. The text makes it quite clear that the statement has nothing to do with forgery.

There is another statement of Ma'mar regarding al-Zuhri's permission to Ibrahim b. al-Walid al-'Umayri to transmit a book on his authority⁴.

This statement of Ma'mar and the previous statement of al-Zuhri about pressure from the Amirs to write down traditions, led Goldziher to deduce that, though al-Zuhri was a scrupulous man, yet he sometimes came under Umayyad pressure to such an extent that he gave permission to transmit books on his authority, without having read them; thus the Umayyad succeeded in circulating the traditions in their favour on the authority of al-Zuhri⁵!

This whole story is based on misunderstanding of the term 'Arad. In the term of traditionists when a student reads to his teacher it is called 'Arad عرض and when a teacher reads to students it is called Haddatha حدث.

There is the statement of 'Ubaid Allah b. 'Umar who describes how the people brought books to al-Zuhri who, after looking into them, turning the pages, used to say, "This is my tradition... accept them from me"⁷.

3. See Malik's statement. Malik dislikes Ijazah, because a student would gain much knowledge in a short time without much effort, Kifayah, 316.

4. Abu Nu'aim, op. cit., iii, 363.

Therefore, it is not the case, as understood by Goldziher, that the Umayyads exploited al-Zuhri in this way. Was it not possible for them to add traditions to their books after reading to al-Zuhri? Had they been eager to do this, they might have done something to al-Zuhri's dictations, especially when it was written by their own employed scribes, without bringing the book to him for his permission. Therefore, to examine this kind of forgery there should be some other methods, and the permission of al-Zuhri does not provide a new instance of forgery. It is also strange that not a single tradition is transmitted in Ibrāhīm's name.

As a matter of fact, these statements concerning the transmission of books, without being read or being read by students, have their own problems of a quite different nature.

In early days, the traditionists preferred to listen to their teachers, and it was the best method for learning and transmitting traditions. To read to the teachers was a second-class method for learning the traditions and the word Haddathanā may not be used in this case. The idea prevailed to such an extent that al-Taḥāwī had to write a book in the fourth century Hijrah to refute this and to prove that both methods were equally valid.¹

There was also the problem of receiving the books without reading. If a teacher gave a book to his students, without its being read in his presence, or someone brought the book to his teacher, asking his permission to transmit it without its being read, would this kind of transmission be lawful and should it be permitted? Some professors rejected this sort of permission while others approved of it and al-Zuhri belongs to the second group². It is called Munāwalah. 'Ubaid Allāh describes the practice of al-Zuhri that he used to look into books and turning the pages here and there used to permit them to transmit the traditions on his authority.

Al-Zuhri's Educational Activities in His Last Days.

In the last days he became tired and it affected his activities. He gave books to some students and did not read to them nor did he allow them to be read¹. Afterwards he retired from teaching². This was perhaps only a year or so before his death.

Al-Zuhri and his Critics.

He has been accused of three things by some traditionists.

Irsāl or Tadlis.

It is reported, as the saying of Yaḥyā al-Qaṭṭān, that al-Zuhri's Mursals were like wind. As he was ḥāfiz, he could have given the name of his authority if he had wished, but sometimes he did not name his authorities³. Therefore, there must have been some defect in the isnād. This charge requires a thorough study of his Mursalāt, because sometimes he transmitted only the Matn and at another meeting he mentioned isnāds when the students asked him⁴. Perhaps the charge was based on deduction instead of an actual enquiry into the materials. Therefore, Aḥmad sharply refutes this charge⁵.

Not Transmitting from Mawālī.

He was told that people blamed him for not transmitting traditions from Mawālī. He replied that he did transmit traditions from them, but when he found the same traditions in the families of Muhājirīn and Anṣār he did not transmit from other sources⁶. Nāfi', client of Ibn 'Umar, also complained that al-Zuhri learnt traditions from him, then went to Sālim and confirmed whether or not he had heard those traditions from his father. Later, he related them on the authority of Sālim⁷.

He is also accused of using black colour for dyeing his hair, so one of the scholars did not write from him.

7. Fasawī, ii, 216a; Jāmi', 15a; Huffāz, i, 88. See also Kāmil, i, 292a.

3. The gravest charge against him is his co-operation with the ruling family¹. There were many great scholars who cooperated with the government and held offices, e.g., al-Sha'bī, Hasan al-Baṣrī, Qabīṣah and others. Therefore, it cannot be a charge against someone that he accepted an office in the government, provided that his conduct was right.

Goldziher and some other modern scholars charged him with falsification of traditions for the benefit of the Umayyads. Therefore his relation with the Umayyads needs investigation.

AL-ZUHRI AND THE Umayyads.

Al-Zuhri and Marwān.

It is said, "When still quite a youth, he had paid his respects to Marwān"². This statement is refuted by an early historian, Yahyā b. Bukair³. Historical circumstances did not provide a chance for this kind of visit.

Marwān became Caliph in 64 A.H., reigning only for nine to ten months⁴. In such a short period, he had to fight three battles and had to send many expeditions. Meanwhile al-Zuhri's father was against Marwān, on the side of Ibn al-Zubair⁵ who was at the climax of his power at that time. Al-Zuhri was then between seven and fifteen years of age. He could not have been independent of his father at such an early age; also it was not easy to take a journey from al-Madīnah to Damascus, especially in those days. Had he been there he could not have achieved anything. Therefore, all the historical facts are against this hypothesis.

Al-Zuhri and 'Abd al-Mālik.

Undoubtedly he was attached to the Caliph's court from the time of 'Abd al-Mālik to Hishām's⁶. It is also true that he had been heavily in debt several times, that was paid off by Caliphs¹, yet his relation with the Caliphs was not always smooth. It was impossible for him to make a false statement or to remain quiet on certain occasions. Walid asked him about a saying, in circulation at that time in Syria, "God writes down only the good deeds of Amīrs and does not record any bad deed". He replied that this was (Bātil) a false statement, and proved it quite wrong. Walid said, "these people mislead us..."².

Once Hishām asked a certain question concerning the name of a person mentioned in the Qur'ān but who was not named precisely. Al-Zuhri said, "It was 'Abd Allāh b. Ubai b. Salūl". The answer was against the wish of Hishām. He told al-Zuhri, "You lie, it was 'Alī". On this occasion al-Zuhri became so furious that he rebuked Hishām and even his father. He said, "By Allāh, if a voice from Heaven proclaimed that Allāh had permitted lying, still I would not lie..."³.

Not only this, but Hishām had to listen calmly to al-Zuhri. He used to denounce al-Walid for his bad character, and asked Hishām to dismiss al-Walid from Wilāyat al-'Ahd. Al-Walid swore that if he had a chance, he would kill al-Zuhri⁴. Al-Zuhri himself was aware of this danger, and was ready to flee to the Byzantine Empire, in the event of al-Walid's inheriting the Caliphate⁵. He did not give any special privileges to his princely student while teaching him traditions⁶. Therefore, it would be unfair to history, to deduce from al-Zuhri's relation with the Umayyad dynasty, that he was a tool in their hands, and that they exploited his name, fame and knowledge to circulate false traditions in their favour.

Did Al-Zuhri Provide a Substitute for the Pilgrimage? Refutation of Al-Ya'qūbī and Goldziher.

The most crucial point is the statement of the Shi'ite historian, al-Ya'qūbī who said that 'Abd al-Malik, for certain political reasons, prevented the Syrians from al-Hajj, because Ibn al-Zubair was imposing his Bai'at upon them. 'Abd al-Malik quoting a tradition from al-Zuhri, gave them a substitute for al-Hajj; the pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and al-Tawāf around the Rock. So he built the Dome, and tawāf continued in the Umayyad dynasty¹. According to Goldziher, it was left to the theologian al-Zuhri to legalize and justify this action².

Goldziher reached this conclusion relying, for the most part, on al-Ya'qūbī's statement, but it needs much more careful study, because its implications and consequences are far-reaching. Many other scholars, depending upon al-Ya'qūbī, have established misleading opinions about Al-Zuhri³.

Apart from al-Zuhri's meeting with 'Abd al-Malik which did not take place earlier than 81 A.H.⁴, it is better to judge this statement on its own merits.

Palestine in 67 A.H. was out of 'Abd al-Malik's control⁵. The Umayyad had been in Mecca on the occasion of the pilgrimage in the year 68 A.H.⁶. Therefore if 'Abd al-Malik had prevented the people from al-Hajj it would have been after 68 A.H., when he might have thought about a substitute for al-Hajj and declared that the Rock and Jerusalem were as sacred as Mecca. As he began to build the Dome on the Rock in 69 A.H.⁷, he might have announced his decree on the substitute for al-Hajj on the authority of al-Zuhri in the beginning of the year 69 A.H.

At this time al-Zuhri was somewhere between ten and eighteen years of age. It is inconceivable that a mere child of ten or a boy of eighteen had already achieved such a great fame and respect — not in his native land al-Madinah, but far away in the anti-al-Madinah region, Syria — that he was able to cancel the divine obligatory order of al-Hajj and was in a position to command a substitute¹. Moreover there were many Companions of the Prophet at that time in Syria. Why did 'Abd al-Malik not exploit them? Their authority and the respect they commanded were far greater than that of al-Zuhri, a boy of ten to eighteen years, and the Syrians would have heard them with more reverence. If these Syrian scholars were anti-Umayyads, then their sayings and protests must have come to us through their pupils or Abbasid historians, but there seems to be no record of such protests. If they were pro-Umayyad and worldly people who would not have protested for the sake of the Prophet, then they would have protested at being slighted, because this 'honour' of fabrication was given to someone else, their authorities were challenged, and they were not given full respect.

Further, how could those religious-minded people who agitated against 'Abd al-Malik's prevention of al-Hajj agree on such a false deed and accept it? Was the whole population of Syria so foolish that they were mocked by 'Abd al-Malik and al-Zuhri so easily? According to al-Ya'qūbī, this practice as a substitute for al-Hajj continued during the Umayyad period, but he himself describes how from 72 A.H. onwards al-Hajj ceremony was performed under the governorship of the Umayyad. So this 'Anti-Meccan' Caliph, 'Abd al-Malik, went to Mecca for al-Hajj in 75 A.H. as did other Umayyad Caliphs².

Apart from this, the building of the Rock was completed in 72 A.H., and at that time Mecca was under al-Hajjāj's control, who was nothing more than 'Abd al-Malik's governor. According to al-Ya'qūbī himself, al-Hajj was performed in 72 A.H., under the governorship of al-Hajjāj³. Thus there would have been no necessity to make a substitute for al-Hajj, and there would have been no need to continue this practice during the Umayyad dynasty, which was as good as putting an effective weapon in the hands of anti-Umayyad elements.

Moreover, the wording of al-Zuhri, quoted by 'Abd al-Malik and given by al-Ya'qūbī, does not mention, or even suggest the sacredness of the Rock and its Tawāf and so on¹. The statement of al-Zuhri only gives the mosque of Jerusalem as a special privilege. This mosque has been given a special place even in the holy *Qur'ān*². Besides all this, this tradition is not transmitted only by al-Zuhri, but by many others such as:

Hishām — Nāfi' — Ibn 'Umar³.

Salamah b. Kuhail — Hajjah b. 'Adī — 'Alī b. Abū Ṭalib⁴.

Qusaim — Qaz'ah — Abū Sa'id al-Khudri⁵.

Zaid b. Sālim — Sa'id b. Abū Sa'id — Abū Huraira⁸.

Yazid b. Abū Maryam — Qaz'ah — 'Abd Allāh b. 'Amr⁹, and so on.

Therefore, how did the credit for this "fabrication" and theological enterprise go to al-Zuhri alone, who did not see 'Abd al-Malik earlier than 81 A.H.? It is better to quote here J. Horovitz's conclusion about this Hadīth. He says: "Whatever one may think about the authenticity of the Hadīth, there is no ground whatever to doubt but that al-Zuhri really had heard the Hadīth from the mouth of Sa'id ibn al-Musaiyab..."¹⁰.

APPENDIX I

THE MEANING OF THE WORDS HADDATHANĀ, ETC.

Do the words Haddathanā, Akhbaranā and 'An etc. in the chains of transmitters necessarily mean only an oral recitation?

Professor Margoliouth, discussing the letter of the second Caliph 'Umar to Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī and its isnād, says, "It is no surprise to the student of Moslem history that even for a letter oral tradition should be preferred to written documents"¹. There are other scholars who generally assume that the traditions collected in the classical collections were recorded for the first time by their compilers².

The main reason for this assumption is misunderstanding of the term Haddathanā. Among the orientalisks, perhaps, Sprenger was the first scholar who made it clear that this word usually did not mean an oral recitation, and in those days it was the fashion to refer to authors instead of works³.

The word Haddathanā was used in a very wide sense. If a man read a book of traditions to his teacher, he could use this word. If the teacher read to his students from a book or from memory, the same word was used to describe the channel of knowledge. Some scholars applied different terms to these two different methods of learning. If the teacher read to his students, then the students could use the word Haddathanā whenever they transmit

2. See Justice M. Shafi' as cited in the Tarjūmān, Risālat Number Lahore 1961 p. 267. Mingana has more far-fetched ideas. In his opinion the terms Rawā and Haddathanā, etc., mean only oral transmission. He says, "But to my knowledge neither expression has ever referred to a written document lying before the narrator". See Mingana, An important manuscript of Bukhārī, p. 21. Therefore when Ibn Khallikān writes about Abū Zaid al-Marwazī, Mingana translates it "And he taught orally", op. cit., 24. He thinks, depending upon this peculiar meaning of the term Haddatha, etc. that the text of Bukhārī was written down, very late at the end of the fourth century, op. cit., 22-3.

ted that particular tradition, but if the student read to his teacher then he would use the term khbaranā. In general this difference was not strictly observed¹.

Here are some examples collected from the classical books to investigate the meaning of this word which will explain the word and its usage in the science of traditions.

حدثنا عمرو بن عباس حدثنا محمد بن جعفر حدثنا شعبه ... قال عمرو في كتاب محمد بن جعفر بياض

1. Bukhārī relates a tradition from 'Amr who in turn relates from Muḥammad b. Ja'far from Shu'bah. Bukhārī does not give the complete Hadīth and leaves a blank space in the book, quoting his teacher 'Amr, saying, "In the book of Muḥammad was a blank space"². Yet the word Haddathanā is used throughout the chains (isnād) without any reference to the book.

١ - اسماعيل عن ايوب عن يعلى بن حكيم عن سليمان بن يسار
٢ - حماد بن زيد عن ايوب قال كتب إلى يعلى بن حكيم قال سمعت سليمان بن يسار

2. The two above-mentioned channels are given by Muslim one after the other on one page³. In the isnād of the first Hadīth there is no mention of writing, while the second one explicitly admits a written record. In this case even the word 'an', instead of Haddathanā, is used which is much inferior to the latter one.

3. 'Umar wrote a Waqf testimony for his Khaibar land. The testimony was transmitted as a written document, but the word 'an' is used for its transmission⁴.

4. Al-Mughīrah wrote traditions and sent them to Mu'āwiyah. These traditions were related by Maṣṣūr 'an al-Sha'bī 'an Warrād — he was the scribe who wrote down the traditions — 'an Al-Mughīrah, without giving any hint of what they recorded. The same traditions were related by Ibn Ashwa' 'an al-Sha'bī with details of the incidents⁵.

6. Here is a very interesting remark. It shows that Ibn Ḥanbal had a copy of al-Jazari's traditions and went to read them to his teacher 'Abd al-Ṣamad who asked him to correct the name and so he did². 'Amr b. Shu'aib, the earlier transmitter of this tradition, imparted it from books³. Now it appears that in every stage of the transmission of this tradition, a book was employed, yet for the narration the word Haddathanā is used without referring to the book.

9. 'Abd al-Razzāq asked Yahyā b. Ma'in to write only a single tradition, while he dictated to him from memory — without any book — Yahyā replied, "Never, not a single word"². The method of imparting the traditions is dictation from the book, but it is not mentioned in Yahyā's traditions when he imparted them.

13. Tirmidhī says that some scholars criticized 'Amr b. Shu'aib's traditions because he related them — in their opinion — from his grandfather's book without being read in his presence⁶. Here a book is used but the word employed for its transmission is 'an'.

14. Here the book is employed for imparting the traditions with the use of the usual term *Haddathanā*⁷.

مسدد بن مسرهد حدثنا عبدالله بن داود عن الاعمش ... « يكرهون العادة » ... قال مسدد قلت لعبدالله بن داود « يكرهونه للعادة » فقال هكذا هو ولكن وجدته في كتابي هكذا .

15. In this tradition we find a minor mistake of the copyist, who copied العادة instead of للعادة. The teacher read it as it was written. When a student wanted to correct him, he was assured by his teacher that the remark was right but the teacher read it according to what was written in the book¹. Here is a use of the book with the usual term Haddathanā.

16. Abū Dāwūd transmitted a portion of the booklet of Samurah, in different chapters of his Sunan without mentioning the book and employing the usual term *Haddathanā*².

أخبرنا محمد بن المنقذ قال حدثنا ابن أبي عدي هذا من كتابه ... وحدثنا ابن أبي عدي من حفظه ...

17. In this statement al-Nasa'i gives an example of a Hadith which was read to students twice by the teacher, once from memory and once from the book³. Had there been no variation, perhaps he would not have mentioned this practice.

شعبه عن قتاده عن الحسن عن سمرة قال قال رسول الله قال ابو عبد الرحمن الحسن عن سمرة كتاب

18. The term 'an' is employed to transmit the traditions, while according to the author these traditions were handed down to al-Ḥasan in the form of a book⁴.

19. A tradition was transmitted on the authority of Muḥammad b. Maṣnūr — Sufyān — Bayān b. Bishr. Al-Nasā'i says that this tradition does not belong to Bayān, and perhaps Sufyān said, "Haddathanā Ithnān [it was reported to me by two persons]", and the letter Alif was dropped from the book, eventually becoming *Bayān*⁵. He supported his argument by another tradition which reads, "Haddathanā Rajulān"¹. This error could only take place if the book was used for copying and reading and was without dots and other diacritical signs, yet there is no mention of the book and the usual method 'an' is used for imparting.

20. There is another example of discrepancy in the text explained by al-Nasa'i. A tradition is transmitted by three channels and their ultimate source is ابن الحوتكية عن أبي Ubai Dharr, but one of the narrators related it on the authority of Ubai أبي Ubai, al-Nasa'i says, "The correct reading is Abī Dharr أبو Ubai and it seems that the word Dhar was dropped from the book and was read أبو Ubai"².

21. Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal, speaking about Ibn al-Mubārak, says that he used to transmit traditions from the book³, but if we go through the traditions transmitted on his authority we may never find a reference to the book.

22. Ibn Ḥanbal says that Shu'bah used to read in Baghdād. There were four students who used to write in the lectures. One of them was Ādam b. 'Abd al-Rahmān. When Ādam was asked, he affirmed the statement and said that he had a very high speed of writing. He further added, "I used to write and the people used to copy from me. Shu'bah came to Baghdād. He imparted traditions in forty lectures... I attended twenty of them. I heard two thousand traditions and missed twenty lectures"⁴. In this statement Ādam uses the word heard, though he took these traditions by means of dictation and wrote them down. So the word Haddathanā gives half of the picture.

23. Whenever Zuhair b. Mu'āwiyah heard a tradition twice from his teacher he wrote down 'finished the task' كتب عليه فرغت⁵. Now here are two further examples of this kind.

24. The Muwatta' of Mālik b. Anas is a well-known book. The book was entitled by the author himself, not like most of the the early books which did not have any titles save the names of their compilers, e.g., the book of 'Urwah, the book of Qatādah, etc.

The authors of the classical books utilized the material of the Muwatta' freely, referring to Mālik without mentioning the book. Here is an example of one tradition regarding ablution with sea-water, taken from the Muwatta' with its quotations in the classical books.

1. Haddathanī Yaḥyā	'An Mālik 'An Ṣafwān...	1
2. Haddathanā b. Maslamah	'An Mālik 'An	2
3. Akhbaranā Qutaibah	'An 'An	3

5. Haddathanā Hishām	Thanā Haddathanī	5
6. Qutaibah	'An
7. Ma'n Haddathanā	'An	6
8. Abū Salamah	'An	7

In all the above cases the traditions were transmitted, not orally, but through the book, yet referring to the author only.

25. Al-Maghāzī of Ibn Ishāq is a well-known book. The text was established and the book was titled by the author himself. The book was transmitted by several pupils of Ibn Ishāq⁸.

Now we may compare the version of Ibn Hishām with that of Muḥammad b. Salamah⁹ (see Appendix No. iv). There are very minor differences here and there as are usually found between two manuscripts of the same work, except for one main variation only in isnād which is quite different and reads as follows: 'Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥasan al-Ḥarrānī — al-Nufailī — Muḥammad b.

2. A.D., Tahārah, 41.

Salamah — Ibn Ishāq. The date goes back to 454 A.H. when the manuscript was read to al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī.

It is inconceivable that such a large book should have been transmitted orally for five centuries and that students had to memorize the whole book instead of writing it down.

Therefore, if any isnād bears the usual term Haddathanā, Akhbaranā, 'An, etc., it does not necessarily mean that the traditions were transmitted orally and no books were used. In fact it indicates only the current methods of that time for the handling of documents: by means of copying from a book or dictation from a written source, etc.

Summing up the discussion, the terms Haddathanā, Akhbaranā, 'An, etc., were employed to indicate only the current methods of documentation, which took several forms, e.g.,

Copying from a written document.

Writing from a written source through dictation.

Reading of a written document by the teacher.

Reading of a written document by a student.

Transmitting a document orally and recording by students.

Transmitting a document orally and its being received by students aurally.

The only common key point between all these methods is the permission of the Shaikh to students to utilize the information. Those who utilized the material without permission were called 'Sāriq al-Hadīth'.

APPENDIX II

THE PROBLEM OF ENORMOUS NUMBERS OF HADĪTH.

In Chapter III, we have already seen a sketch of the educational activities on the subject of hadīth.

There are references to hundreds of teachers from whom al-Taurī, Ibn al-Mubārak, al-Zuhri, etc. had written aḥādīth. In the works of biographers we find a long list of teachers and students of eminent scholars. There are at least fifty students of al-Zuhri who made their written collections from him¹. If, on an average, every one of them had written only five hundred traditions from him, then this number would have been 25,000. If we go one step further and assume for example that every student of al-Zuhri had only two or three students, then this number of traditions might have increased at the end of the second century to some 75,000, and in the time of Bukhārī and his contemporaries they would have been in hundreds of thousands.

Thus, the numbers of a few thousand aḥādīth reached about three quarters of a million in the mid third century.

According to Ibn Ḥanbal's statement, over 7,000,000 traditions were sound, of which 6,000,000 were memorized by Abū Zur'ah².

Al-Bukhārī claimed that he made his collection of traditions out of six hundred thousand³. His book contains only 7,397 Hadīth with repetition, and only 2,602 Hadīth without repetition⁴.

1. Supra, al-Zuhri, in the third chapter.

2. Madkhal, 13.

3. Bagh., ii, 8, 14. Other traditionists also gave an enormous number which they memorized or wrote down. I discuss only one case of al-Bukhārī to clarify the problem.

4. Ibn Hajar, Hady al-Sāri, as quoted by al-Sibā'i in Sunnah, 501.

The actual number of traditions preserved in the Ṣiḥāh and the other collections is only a small fraction of the body of the traditions described above. This is a puzzling problem. Many scholars have been perplexed, and so have reached very strange conclusions. Guillaume says "Bukhārī's biographer says that he selected his material from no less than 600,000 Hadīth. If we allow for repetitions which occur under different heads, he reduced this vast number of forgeries or dubious reports to less than 3,000 Hadīth. In other words, less than one in every 200 traditions which circulated in his day could pass his test"¹.

The problem consists of (a) Hadīth and (b) enormous numbers and their implications.

(a) Hadīth in the terms of some traditionists, means utterances, deeds and tacit approval of the Prophet², while in definitions of other scholars it covers utterances, deeds, legal decisions and tacit approval of the Prophet as well as those of Companions and the Successors³.

(b) As for the problem of enormous numbers, every channel of transmission is counted as a separate Hadīth. 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Maḥdī (d. 198) says, "I have thirteen traditions from al-Mughīrah transmitting from the Prophet, concerning 'al-mash 'ala al-Khuffain'"⁴. It is quite obvious that al-Mughīrah is reporting a single action or habit of the Prophet. It does not matter how many times this action was repeated. It would be reported as a single action. As this single action is reported to 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Maḥdī from thirteen channels, he counts them as thirteen traditions.

The first four centuries of the Hijrah were the golden age for the science of tradition, and the number of transmitters grew tremendously. Ibn Khuzaimah (d. 311) gives some thirty isnāds for one Hadīth in one chapter, concerning the single act of 'Ā'ishah, for cleansing the cloth¹. Meanwhile it is obvious that there might have been many other channels of transmission which were unknown to him. Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj (d. 261) cites the names of a great number of transmitters, when he argues about certain points, especially when there is a mistake committed by some transmitters. For example, he gives thirteen traditions concerning the single incident of Ibn 'Abbās and his tahajjud prayer. In the prayer, he stood on the left of the Prophet and then the Prophet pulled him to his right side. Yazīd b. Abū Ziyād related on the authority of Kurāib, that Ibn 'Abbās stood on the right side of the Prophet, but he was placed on the left. On this occasion Muslim gives thirteen isnāds — making thirteen Hadīth — contradicting Yazīd's statement². Further, he does not give the complete isnād and their full growth until his time. He mostly gives the details of channels until about 130 A.H. Had he given the complete comprehensive isnād flourishing in his own time, they might have grown to fifty traditions at least.

Growth and development of isnād in the third century.

There have been some traditionists who claim that they had every Hadīth from one hundred channels³, and many others who have written every Hadīth from twenty or thirty channels⁴. So we may now infer what the real numbers of the traditions were which were described as 600,000. Another point is that they were not purely traditions of the Prophet, but the sayings of the Companions and the Successors and their legal decisions as well; the word 'Hadīth' covers all these subjects and matters in some scholars' terms.

1. See Appendix No. V, photocopy of the MSS. of Ṣaḥīh of Ibn Khuzaimah, page related to this subject.

2. Muslim, Tamyīz, fol. 6b-7a; for more examples see fol. 10a; 11 channels; fol. 11b; 17 channels; these isnāds are shown in the mid-second century as they flourished, not at the time of Muslim, who was a century later.

3. Sibā'ī, Sunnah, 224, quoting sayings of Ibrāhīm b. Sa'īd al-Jauharī from Tānīb al-Khatīb.

4. Madkhal, 9; and it is quite possible, at least 50 students transmitted al-Zuhri's book, so within 25 years' time his traditions might have grown 30 or 40 times, see also Majrūhīn, 10a; Jāmi' 165a; Mizān, i, 35.

The True Numbers of the Traditions.

What is the real number of authentic traditions? The exact number is unknown, but according to Sufyān al-Thaurī, Shu'bah, Yahyā al-Qaṭṭān, 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī and Ibn Ḥanbal 4,000 Hadīth only¹. The statement is incomprehensible. Gilānī is inclined to a number of less than 10,000 Hadīth, based in his statement, on the quotation from Tāhir al-Jazā'irī, who in turn was quoting al-Ḥākim al-Nishābūrī². This is apparently a misinterpretation of al-Ḥākim's attitude. He gives an estimate of less than 10,000 Hadīth for the first-class authentic traditions which are transmitted according to al-Bukhārī and Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj's stipulation. Furthermore he himself objects to this number, saying, "How can it be said that his [Prophet] traditions do not reach 10,000 traditions when 4,000 Companions... have transmitted traditions from him, who associated with him for more than twenty years..."³.

It is said that the Musnad of Ibn Ḥanbal consists of some 40,000 Traditions, and without repetition it would be about 30,000⁴, but there has not been any research so far.

Al-Bukhārī, his Ṣaḥīḥ, and other Traditions.

Al-Bukhārī did not claim that what he left out were the spurious, nor that there were no authentic traditions outside his collection. On the contrary he said, "I only included in my book al-Jāmi' those that were authentic, and I left out many more authentic traditions than this to avoid unnecessary length"⁵. He had no intention of collecting all the authentic traditions. He only wanted to compile a manual of Hadīth, according to the wishes of his Shaiḥ Ishāq b. Rāhwaiḥ⁶, and his function is quite clear from the title of his book "Al-Jāmi', al-Musnad, al-Ṣaḥīḥ, al-Mukhtasar, min umūr Rasūl al-Allāh wa Sunanihi, wa ayyāmih"⁷. The

2. Gilānī, Tadwīn, 66-67.

3. Madkhal, 11-12.

4. Shākir, Commentary on Suyūṭī's alfiyah, pp. 218-222, Shākir gives the estimate of the early scholars of 30,000 to 40,000; perhaps the first number indicates traditions without repetition. For the average of repetitions see, infra, Arabic Section.

7. Ibn al-Ṣalāḥ, Ulum al-Hadīth, 24-5.

word al-Mukhtasar, 'epitome', itself explains that al-Bukhārī did not make any attempt at a comprehensive collection.

Now it is clear that when traditionists give enormous numbers for the traditions, they mean channels and sources of their transmission, and do not mean real numbers of Hadīth. But when they give small figures, saying: "Al-Zuhrī has 1,000 Hadīth, or al-Qāsim has 200 Hadīth" they most probably mean Hadīth as a subject matter not counted according to its isnād.

Does 'Unauthentic' Mean a False Statement?

Traditionists, at first, look into the isnād and if it is defective, they call the Hadīth defective, without scrutinizing the subject matter¹; because a Hadīth, according to their criteria, cannot be authentic unless both its parts are perfect.

Authentic matter with false isnād is a false statement. This will be clear from Appendix III. This appendix — which is a collection of traditions, transmitted by Bishr b. al-Ḥusain on the authority of Zakariyā b. 'Adī from Anas b. Mālik from the Prophet — is called spurious, though about one quarter of the traditions of this collection are found in Bukhārī and Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ collections, and are called authentic. The only reason for discarding them is that it is maintained that Zakariyā did not hear all these traditions from Anas, and they are falsely attributed to him.

Therefore, if the scholars say that 200,000 Hadīth were not authentic, it does not mean that they were spurious. It only means that their isnāds are questioned while the subject itself may or may not be false.

٩ — حدثنا أبو اليمان أخبرني شعيب عن الزهري قال كان عروة بن الزبير يحدث أنه سأل عائشة عن قول الله تعالى « وان خفتم الا تقسطوا في اليتامى فانكحوا ما طاب لكم من النساء مثنى وثلاث ورباع فان خفتم ألا تعدلوا فواحدة أو ما ملكت أيمانكم » . قالت عائشة رضى الله عنها وعن أبيها هي اليتيمة تكون في جحر وليها فيرغب في جمالها ومالها ويريد أن يتزوجها (٧٢/ب) بأدنى من سنة نساءها . فنهوا عن نكاحهن إلا أن يقسطوا لهن في اكمال الصداق . وامروا بنكاح من سواهن من النساء . قالت عائشة ثم استفتى الناس رسول الله ﷺ . فأنزل الله تعالى « يستفتونك في النساء قل الله يفتيكم فيهن » الآية . قالت عائشة فبين الله لهم في هذه الآية أن اليتيمة اذا كانت ذات جمال ومال رغبوا في نكاحها ولم تلحقوها بسنة نساءها في اكمال الصداق . وإذا كانت مرغوباً عنها في قلة الجمال والمال تركوها والتمسوا غيرها من النساء .

ﷺ فقلت : يا رسول الله أن أفلح أخا أبي القعيس ، استأذن علي فأبيت أن آذن له حتى استأذنك في ذلك . فقال لي رسول الله ﷺ : وما يمنعك أن تأذني لعمك ؟ . فقلت : يا رسول الله ! أن الرجل ليس هو أرضعني ، ولكن أرضعني امرأة . فقالت قال رسول الله ﷺ : ائذني له فإنه عمك . تربت يمينك . قال عروة فبذلك كانت تقول : حرموا من الرضاة ما تحرمون من النسب .

مقارنة الروايات :

اختلف الرواة في كلمة واحدة فقال بعضهم : « من أدرك ركعتين من العصر » ، وقال أكثرهم : « من أدرك ركعة من العصر فقد أدرك » .

هل روى أبو هريرة هكذا . فقال مرة « ركعتين » والأخرى « ركعة » ، أم أخطأ بعض تلاميذه ؟ الأمر غير واضح . ومن الغريب أن مسلماً أخرج عن عبد الأعلى عن معتمر عن معمر فقال : « ركعة » . وأخرج النسائي عن محمد عن معتمر عن معمر - فقال : « من أدرك ركعتين من العصر » .

الرواية عن أكثر من شيخ : يبدو أن زيد بن أسلم هو الوحيد الذي يروي عن عطاء بن يسار والأعرج . كذلك لم أجد متابعاً للزهري في روايته عن عائشة ، وقد روى الزهري عن أبي سلمة عن أبي هريرة أيضاً .

- ١ - أبو غطفان وعنه : عبد الله بن عبيد الله . عوانة ٢٧٠/١

مقارنة الروايات :

لم أجد من خرج هذا الحديث هذا السياق في محل واحد . وهو في الواقع عبارة عن عدة أحاديث خاصة بالصيام وفوائده جمعت في موضع واحد لوحدة الموضوع وجزأ المؤلفون منه أجزاء وذكروه هنا وهناك . وروى البعض جزءاً من هذا الحديث والبعض الآخر أجزاء أخرى منه . والروايات كلها متقاربة الألفاظ ومتفقة المعنى . وقد وردت في بعض الروايات زيادة « الحسنه » بعشر أمثالها إلى سبعمائة ضعف . كما وردت كلمة « يوم القيامة » ، ولخوف فم الصائم أطيب عند الله « يوم القيامة » . وهذه الزيادة لا تؤثر في المعنى .

الأرجح أن جابراً سمع هذا الحديث عن أبي هريرة لأنه رواه أحياناً عن أبي هريرة عن النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم، وأحياناً عن النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم مباشرة، أو لعل الراوي توهم فاستقط اسم أبي هريرة كما يفهم من كلام الطبراني.

مقارنة الروايات :

١ - الروايات عن أبي هريرة : اتفق الرواة على قول المؤمنين « آمين » بعد قراءة الامام

(ولا الضالين) . ووجود الاختلاف في بعض الكلمات أدى الى الاختلاف بين الفقهاء

هل يؤمن مع الامام أو بعد الامام ؟ ، اذ ورد في بعض الروايات « اذا أمن الامام

فأمّنوا » ، وروى بعض تلامذة أبي هريرة جزءاً من هذا الحديث الخاص بالتأمين فقط .

٢ - مقارنة عامة الروايات عن الصحابة الآخرين : لا توجد الروايات المروية عن

الصحابة الآخرين بسياق أبي هريرة ، لكن الروايات المذكورة عن سبعة من الصحابة

تتفق مع رواية أبي هريرة على فضيلة التأمين .

مقارنة الروايات :

الروايات عن أبي هريرة : الحديث طويل ويختلف الرواة أحياناً في ترتيب الجمل ، ويختلف بعضهم بعض الكلمات التي لا تؤثر في المعنى . وأكثر الروايات تقريباً متحدة في الألفاظ مع الاختلاف في ترتيب الجمل . وقطع بعض المؤلفين هذا الحديث فأثبتوه في أمكنة مختلفة . وتوجد في رواية زيد بن أسلم كلمة زائدة « وإذا قرأ فأنصتوا » حم ٤٢٠/٢ . وهي ماثرة عند الفقهاء .

لقد شككوا في جمع السنة ، وزعموا أنها كانت تنقل شفاهاً لقرون عديدة ، لهذا لا يمكن الاعتماد عليها . وجاء مستشرق شهير مثل البروفسور جوزيف شاخت فادعى أن مجموعة الاحاديث النبوية — وخاصة الفقهية منها — عبارة عن أقاويل ملفقة اخترعها العلماء المسلمون في القرن الثاني والثالث الهجريين . وما الأسانيد التي اعتمد عليها المحدثون فيما بعد الا بعض مخترعات القرنين المذكورين .

ولعل أخطر ما في هذه الاتهامات الباطلة والدعاوى الهدامة ، أنها اتخذت صورة البحث العلمي وموهت على قلبي المعرفة بالاسلام ، بشبهات وتخييلات وتلفيقات ، لا تثبت على النقد والتحجيص .

ولكنها تروج عند السطحيين والفارغين ، وعند المعجبين المقتونين بكل ما جاء من الغرب والغريبين . فلا غرو إن وجد بيننا — نحن المسلمين — من يردد دعاوى المستشرقين ذاتها تريد البيغاء . ومنهم من يتبناها وينسبها لنفسه على أنها من بنات أفكاره . وما هو في الواقع الا مقلد محض ، لا أصالة له ولا ابتكار .

لهذا كانت الحاجة ماسة الى البحث في أمور السنة ، وتجلية ما غمض من تاريخها ، ورد الأمور الى نصابها الصحيح . ولا شك ان الموضوع واسع ومتشعب ولا يستطيع كتاب واحد لفرد واحد ، أن يوفيه حقه ، لهذا آثرت أن أتخذ جانباً واحداً من جوانب الموضوع المتعددة ، فرأيت أن أبحث في تاريخ تدوين الحديث وبداية الأسانيد وما يتصل بها من الموضوعات الفرعية الأخرى ، لأبين قيمة ما أنتجه علماء المسلمين في الماضي ، وبطلان دعوى المتجهجين في الحاضر ، متبعاً في ذلك أسلوب البحث العلمي ، بعيداً عن روح الانشاء .

الى نتائج هامة في دراسة الحديث .

وقد عكفت على دراسة الفترة من عهد الرسول صلى الله عليه وسلم الى منتصف القرن الثاني على وجه التقرير ، فوجدت بالبحث مراجع تشير الى آلاف من الكتب التي كانت متداولة بين المحدثين ، وأن الأحاديث كانت تدون في عصر النبوة نفسه ، وإن الصحابة ألقوا الكتب في الموضوعات العديدة . ثم بحثت في تدريس الحديث ، وكيف كان استعمال الكتاب شائعاً في الدراسة وطريقة الاملاء رائجة منذ عهد مبكر ... وتطرق الى مشكلة نسبة الكتب الى المؤلفين ، وكيف كان أسلوبهم ... وبعد ذلك انتقلت الى الأسانيد وبنائها ، والى أي مدى يمكن الاعتماد عليها .

وكانت هناك موضوعات جانبية احتاجت الى مزيد من التوضيح ، كمعنى كلمة « حدثنا » وطريقة عد الاحاديث ... ومفهوم الاحاديث غير الصحيحة والموضوعة الخ ...

وقد كتبت هذا البحث باللغة الانجليزية وقدمته الى جامعة كامبردج في تشرين أول (اكتوبر) ١٩٦٦ م رسالة لنيل الدكتوراة .

ومهما يكن من أمر فقد كانت طريقي في الكتابة هي اتباع المنهج العلمي الاستقرائي ، باذلاً جهدي وطاقتي ، غير مدع الكمال فالكمال لله وحده . وحسبي أنني أمطت الثام عن كثير من الحقائق ورددت كثيراً من الشبهات والأباطيل وذلك بفضل الله وحده . وأرجو بذلك أن أكون قد خدمت ديني ، وأرضيت ربي ، وأنصفت الحقيقة من ظالمها ، وساهمت مع المخلصين في

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ

أجمع المسلمون - منذ ثلاثة عشر قرناً حتى الآن - على أن لشريعة الاسلام مصدرين اساسيين هما القرآن الكريم والسنة المطهرة، فالقرآن هو الأساس، والسنة شارحته ومبيته؛ بقول الرسول ﷺ، وفعله، وتقريره . قال تعالى : « وأنزلنا إليك الذكر لتبين للناس ما نزل إليهم ولعلهم يتفكرون » .

فكان بعضهم - وهم قلة قليلة - مخلصاً للبحث ، وان لم يصادفهم التوفيق في كثير من الاحيان وذلك لبعدهم عن روح الشرق وجوّه ودياره . وكان هناك آخرون همهم «تبشير المسلمين» بمعتقدات وآراء مغايرة، وكانت طريقتهم الطعن في الاسلام مباشرة وتشويه جماله . لكنها لم تأت بثمرة مرجوة ، لذلك اعتمد الآخرون على أسلوب خفي : هدفه التشكيك الدائب في أصول الاسلام . وقد نال هؤلاء الحديث النبوي بنصيب كبير من هذا الهجوم ، فكتبوا في الحديث بحوثاً مشحونة بكثير من الاخطاء والتهم والتحريفات نتيجة سوء الفهم أو سوء القصد أو هما معاً .
